U.S. INTERVENES IN KOREA

TRUMAN ANNOUNCES MOMENTOUS DECISION

Planes, warships to aid South Korea; Seventh Fleet to protect Taiwan

U.S. GENERAL TO HEAD DEFENCE

Washington, June 27.

President Truman announced on Tuesday that he has ordered the United States air and sea forces to support the South Korean forces in their fight against the Communist invaders from North Korea.

The decision to give the South Korean Republic American air support from nearby Japanese bases was settled at an emergency White House conference between the President and his military high command.

The President said in a statement that the Communist attack on South Korea "makes it plain beyond all doubt that Communism has passed beyond the use of subversion to conquer independent nations, and will now use armed invasion and war."

At the same time he said he had ordered the American Seventh Fleet to "prevent any attack on Taiwan" the island rampart where Chiang Kai-shek's Chinese Nationalists are making a stand against the Communist conquerors of China.

The President's decision committed American military forces to armed action on possibly a major scale for the first time since World War II.

It followed an emergency White House meeting with his military high command. The decision was announced to the world shortly after Congressional leaders of both parties had been informed at a special White House briefing conference.

The President's statement said that in Korea Government forces "which were armed to prevent border raids and preserve internal security," were attacked by invaders. He said the United Nations Security Council had called upon the invaders to cease hostilities and to withdraw.

Mr. Truman said: "That they have not done, but, on the contrary, have pressed the attack. The Security Council called on all members of the United Nations to render every assistance to the United Nations in the execution of this resolution. In these circumstances I have ordered the United States air and sea forces to give Korean troops cover and support."

The President said he had also directed that the United States forces in the Philippines be strengthened, and that military assistance to the Philippine Government be accelerated.

"The Seventh Fleet will see that this is done. The determination of the future status of Taiwan must await the restoration of security in the Pacific — a peace settlement with Japan or consideration by the United Nations.

"I have also directed that United States forces in the Philippines be strengthened and that military assistance to the Philippine government be accelerated.

"I have similarly directed acceleration in the furnishing of military assistance to the forces of France and the associated states in Indo-China and the despatch of a military mission to provide close working relation with those forces.

Historic statement

The text of President Truman's historic statement on Tuesday on Korea, adds Associated Press, says in part:

"I have ordered the Seventh Fleet to prevent any attack on Taiwan. As a corollary of this action, I am calling upon the Chinese government on Taiwan to cease all air and sea operations against the mainland.

U.S. planes to bomb towns held by Reds

Tokyo, June 27.

Reliable sources said tonight that American-piloted planes would bomb all South Korean towns held by the North Korean Communists.

Even now, American bombers may be on their way or be actually bombing the towns.

The reports here said that attacks were to start on Tuesday night.—Associated Press.

U.S. pilots shoot down 6 Red planes

Itazuke Airport, Japan, June 27.

Evacuees from South Korea said today that American fighter pilots shot down at least six North Korean planes in dog fights ranging over 20 miles around Kimpo airfield today.

American F-80's and F-81's night fighters fought off Yaks and other Soviet type fighters in day-long air battles as the North Koreans vainly attempted to penetrate the American fighter cover.

Practically every airlifted evacuee witnessed at least one dog fight while waiting for four-engined C-54's to fly them to Japan. The evacuees said the Americans defied intense ground fire as they came in low for landings, but up to 5 p.m. had safely completed all the evacuations attempted.

More than 400 Americans and other foreigners rode the fighter escorted airlift to safety. Most were brought out of besieged Kimpo, 17 miles from Seoul. Others were taken from the smaller strip at Suwon, 20 miles South of Seoul.

C-47's and C-54's were prepared to evacuate 300 remaining in Kimpo.

The evacuees, who fled with only the clothes they wore, said the circling fighters protected the transports "perfectly" putting up medium and high altitude screens around the field. All agreed the American planes refrained from firing on the Northern Koreans until forced to.

The Northerners made several determined bids to strafe the fields but each attempt was driven off with a total of at least six attackers destroyed.

In Tokyo, General MacArthur's Headquarters officially admitted that four North Korean planes were shot down by American fighters over Kimpo airport.

In a communique, SCAP identified the planes as Yaks, adding that the dog fights took place while American fighters were "furnishing protective air coverage."

Three members of the British mission in South Korea elected to remain in Korea as the evacuation planes started taking off. The Ambassador, Mr. Vyvyan Holt, was reported without instructions to depart. His assistant Mr. K. Fatherly said he had been ordered not to report to the British Government, adds Associated Press, United Press and Associated Press.

U.S. General to command

A Seoul broadcast late last night quoted President Syngman Rhee as announcing that an American General had been named South Korean Defence Commander and that General MacArthur had promised bombers and anti-tank guns for a "joint defence operation," continues Associated Press.

The broadcast named the Defence Commander simply as General Church.

This apparently meant Brigadier General, John H. Church, who is listed as Commander of the Ryukyu (Okinawa) Military Government.

A report that American-manned bombers will bomb all towns held by the North Koreans South of the 38th parallel was confirmed on Monday night by usually-informed sources.

Seoul Radio maintained a consistent series of broadcasts saying American planes will come over South Korea, and urging Koreans to keep up their spirits.

The broadcasts also have repeated that a MacArthur field headquarters will be established. The broadcasts said that American troops too will join the battle.

Colonel M. P. Echols, Public Information Officer, said that he knew nothing about this.

But apparently well-founded reports said American planes will begin their bombing runs on Tuesday night.

U.S. seeks UN backing for military action against North Korea

Lake Success, June 27.

The United States was reported ready today to demand United Nations backing for military action against Communist North Korea.

The United States mission refused to confirm these reports, but the Chief American delegate, Mr. Warren R. Austin, announced he would submit a "resolution of importance" to the Security Council late today.

Other diplomatic quarters said the final form of the U.S. proposal was still under consideration at midday. Consultations were in progress at the U.S. Mission in New York.

A British delegation spokesman said his country would support any U.S. motion.

In London, the Prime Minister, Mr. Clement Attlee, planned an announcement on the Korean question after the Security Council meeting here, his second statement since the fighting began.—Associated Press.

Naval battle for Ling Ting Island

Nationalist and Communist surface vessels battled all day yesterday over strategic Outer Ling Ting Island—five miles from Hong Kong.

Conflicting reports poured into Hong Kong—one of the most reliable stating that Communist troops in junks attempted a landing on the island early yesterday morning.

Intermittent gunfire could be heard in Hong Kong from the Ling Ting area yesterday.

Ling Ting, which is the last blockade base the Nationalists hold leading to trade-starved Canton, was reported late last night in Communist hands.

This report, however, was unconfirmed.

More than 2,000 Nationalist troops evacuated to Outer Ling Ting late in May from the Wan Shan Islands, after the Chinese Communists successfully landed more than 3,000 troops.

Within two days after the Communist landings in the Wan Shans, Lap Sap Mei Island, the largest of the Wan Shan group, was overrun.

Landing indicated

A reliable report stated that it was Nationalist warships which were firing upon Ling Ting—thus indicating a successful Communist landing.

If the island has fallen, it will mean that commercial ships will be able to trade with Canton for the first time in more than 10 months.

During the past month, Hong Kong merchant ships have been unable to travel up the Pearl River because of the presence of Nationalist warships and gunboats.

A foreign military observer said yesterday that he believed the Nationalist navy would cease their patrols in the Pearl River area once Nationalist control of Ling Ting ceases.

Island shelled

An official Nationalist naval report yesterday said Nationalist naval units shelled more than 400 Chinese Communists holding out in Chikwanshan South of Pachhan, off the Chekiang coast, 100 miles South of Tinghai, adds a United Press report from Taipeh.

The report said the entire Communist position was destroyed, more than 10 junks nearly sunk and more than 300 Communists were killed.

Meanwhile, Air Force headquarters announced that Nationalist planes in several waves bombed Changting airfield in Western Fukien as well as Swatow harbour on June 26 from morning to dusk.

Another squadron of long distance bombers, escorted by fighters, dropped a large number of bombs on Changting airfield. The announcement said, 70 per cent of the installations on the airfield were destroyed and that the Nationalist planes, after they fulfilled their mission, returned to their base without meeting any resistance.

British Cabinet meets

London, June 27.

The Prime Minister, Mr. Clement Attlee, and his full Cabinet met here today to discuss the latest reports on the Korean fighting. Immediately after their meeting, instructions were cabled to the British delegate to the Security Council, briefing him on Britain's attitude for its critical meeting tonight.

The United Nations Commission in Korea has reported there is practically no hope that the Security Council's demand for a cessation of hostilities will be obeyed.

In Ottawa, Cabinet Ministers have told the Canadian House of Commons that "unprovoked aggression" in Korea has imposed "a very grave" situation that could force changes in Canada's military plans.

The Defence Minister, Mr. Brooke Claxton, said that Canada's current defence budget of $425,000 would be "peanuts" compared to what would be spent if a major war developed.

The Korean development itself might force him to come back to the House to ask for greater outlays, he said. The feeling of the Government, was that the present budget represented a fair contribution by Canada to the Atlantic Pact security and all that could be spared from the national income at present.—Reuter.

RAF CRASH

A Royal Air Force plane crashed in a field three miles from here yesterday, killing two of its four crew members. The third was taken to hospital with severe burns.—Reuter.

SOUTH KOREANS PUSH REDS BACK FROM SEOUL

Tokyo, June 27.

South Korean troops hammered the Communist invasion forces back 13 miles from the capital, Seoul, in a counter-offensive today.

The South Korean Mission in Tokyo announced the Southern land forces had gone over to the offensive early today after being driven back into the Northern suburbs of Seoul.

Attacking with American planes and guns rushed from Japan, the Southerners pushed the Russian-trained Northern army back 10 miles and recaptured Uijongbu, 13 miles North of Seoul.

The mission said the Southern Army was pushing the Communist forces back along the 200-mile front across the waist of the Korean peninsula.

Meanwhile a source at General MacArthur's headquarters said the situation in Korea was "calming down." He said it was not known when the next attack will come.

The communique of SCAP said the American Embassy and the Korean military advisory group staffs had not left Seoul for the South.

SCAP said previous reports of this evacuation "appear to be unfounded."

Seoul Radio announced today that General MacArthur has established a fighter headquarters in Seoul and that beginning tomorrow American fighters will operate in the Korean combat area.

This was not immediately confirmed or denied by General MacArthur's headquarters.

Invaders checked

South Korea announced today its American-trained troops halted the North Korean Communist forces at the gates of Seoul and checked the invaders everywhere along the 200-mile front.

Some Communist troops entered Seoul and were still there, the South Korean Mission to Tokyo said, but the situation had improved so much during the night the government cancelled plans to flee the capital and decided to stick it out there.

A Seoul broadcast said the United States Ambassador, Mr. John J. Muccio returned to Seoul.

Radio Seoul said anti-tank guns and American Mustang fighters rushed to South Korea from Japan by General Douglas MacArthur turned the tide and led to the recapture of Uijongbu, astride the traditional invasion corridor from the North.

The broadcast did not disclose whether the bulk of the Communist troops, which surged into the outskirts of Seoul yesterday, had been driven back through Uijongbu or had been trapped between the two cities.

South Korean P-51 Mustang fighters were patrolling the skies over Seoul, the broadcast said. It said two air raid alarms had been sounded in the city since noon but indicated no Communist planes appeared.—United Press.

NO NATIONALIST AID FOR KOREA

Taipeh, June 27.

President Chiang Kai-shek has turned thumbs down on a suggestion made to him by one of his advisers to offer individual armed aid to the Republic of Korea.

Official quarters here said Nationalist China wished to support the threatened Republic in every possible way, but would do so only in concert with any plan decided by the United Nations.—Associated Press.

Ships cancel Inchon calls

Two merchant ships, which were originally due to call at the Korean port of Inchon, have now cancelled that port from their schedules.

The two ships, the Jardine, Matheson and Company's ss. Choy Sang, which was to leave Hong Kong for Inchon on July 3, will now call at the North China ports of Tientsin and Tsingtao.

A Wallem and Company ship, the ss. Mangarella, will call at the ports of Takao and Keelung. She is due to leave Hong Kong on June 29.

However, a Butterfield and Swire ship, the ss. Tainan, is continuing her voyage to Inchon, her owners have not diverted her to any other port.

No other ships yesterday were on schedule to call at Korean ports from Hong Kong, most shipping companies having accepted a total halt to the runs pending further developments.—Reuter.

Military junta in N. Korea

San Francisco, June 26.

A military junta has been established in North Korea and has taken over all military and political power of the Government, according to a Pyongyang despatch broadcast over the Peking Radio.

The report said that a seven-man Military Affairs Committee had been formed to direct operations against the South.

"All the power in the country has been entrusted to the Committee during the period of the emergency, the radio said. "All government organs both military and civil, as well as political parties and public organizations, must take orders and accept directions from the Military Affairs Committee."

The Committee is, under the direction of Kim Jih-chen, the Communist boss of North Korea.

At the same time, other Pyongyang despatches left little doubt that the Communist offensive was an all-out effort rather than an isolated skirmish.

An editorial from the Communist organ, "Labour News," called on South Korean troops to "turn their rifles against" the government of Dr. Syngman Rhee, who was charged with trying to prevent the unification of Korea and with turning the country into an "American colony."

The North Korean Navy has sunk three South Korean warships a Communist broadcast from Pyongyang said today, adds Associated Press.

The Communist radio monitored in Tokyo, said the Southern ships were off the East Korean coast North of the 38th Parallel.

There was no indication what the warships were but the South has one patrol boat mounting a three inch gun and 20 or 30 minesweepers, mostly former Japanese vessels.—United Press and Associated Press.

Australian bombers for Malaya

Canberra, June 27.

The Australian Prime Minister, Mr. Robert Menzies, announced today that after discussion of Korea the War Cabinet had decided to send a squadron of heavy bombers to Malaya.

The decision was made, he said, after discussions with the British Government.

Mr. Menzies said that the Korean incident could not be looked upon in isolation, nor could Australia regard it as remote from her own interests and safety.

It was clear that the invasion of South Korea represented Communist expansion and that the attack was Communist-inspired and directed.

The heavy bomber squadron will be in addition to the R.A.A.F. Dakota air transport squadron now in the process of transfer to Malaya.—Reuter.

Japanese Cabinet to reorganise

Tokyo, June 27.

The Japanese Cabinet today resigned, to enable Prime Minister Shigeru Yoshida to reorganise portfolios.

Although the reorganisation will be on a large scale, a few of the former ministers are expected to retain their posts.

It is understood that the new Cabinet, which will be Mr. Yoshida's fourth cabinet, will be announced in two or three days.

Liberal Party leaders are said to be considering the merits of 30 candidates for Cabinet posts.

Prime Minister Yoshida yesterday conferred with the former democratic premier, Mr. Hotoshi Ashida.

The conference, which lasted one hour, was held in secrecy at the Foreign Minister's official residence.

It is believed that Mr. Yoshida and Mr. Ashida discussed the formation of a common front with regard to peace issues.—Reuter.

COLGATE DENTAL CREAM HELPS STOP TOOTH DECAY!

Exhaustive Research by Eminent Dental Authorities Proves How Using Colgate Dental Cream Helps Stop Tooth Decay Before It Starts!

NOW dental science offers proof that always brushing teeth with Colgate's right after eating helps stop tooth decay before it starts! Proof—based on hundreds of case histories, two years of continuous research at leading universities—the most conclusive proof in all dentifrice research on tooth decay.

Under the direction of eminent dental authorities, one group of college men and women always brushed their teeth with Colgate Dental Cream right after eating—while another group followed their usual dental care. The average of the group using Colgate's as directed, was a startling reduction in number of cavities—far less tooth decay! The other group developed new cavities at a much higher rate.

Modern research shows tooth decay is caused by mouth acids which are at their worst after meals or snacks. When you brush your teeth with Colgate Dental Cream right after eating, you help remove acids before they can harm enamel. And Colgate's penetrating foam reaches crevices in teeth where food particles often lodge.

The Most Conclusive Proof In All Dentifrice Research On Tooth Decay!

The Colgate's now at your dealer's is the same formula used in the tests. Colgate's contains all the necessary ingredients, including an exclusive ingredient, for effective daily dental care. No risk of irritation to tissues and gums! And no change in flavor, foam, or cleansing action.

No claim is made that using Colgate's can stop all tooth decay, or help cavities already started. But brushing teeth right after eating is the proved way to help stop tooth decay with Colgate Dental Cream.

NO OTHER DENTIFRICE OFFERS PROOF OF THESE RESULTS

Always Use Colgate's To Clean Your Breath While You Clean Your Teeth—And Help Stop Tooth Decay!

SOUTH AFRICA SAYS "NO" TO PAKISTAN

Karachi, June 26.

South Africa has turned down the Pakistan Government's request to postpone the enforcement of the Group Areas Bill pending a round-table conference on the Indian question.

The Union Government reiterated its attitude towards the Bill in a telegram received by the Pakistan Government today.

South Africa said that the Bill (for race segregation) was unlikely to be brought into operation before December, and it was hoped that it would be possible to hold the conference before then.

Pakistan had undertaken to approach the Indian Government to reconsider their attitude of non-participation in the round-table conference if the postponement was agreed to.

The South African reply is now under consideration by the Pakistan Government, the source said.—Reuter.

KING ABDULLAH'S POSITION

Manchester, June 26.

The "Manchester Guardian" said today that the position of King Abdullah of Hashemite Jordan is almost fortuitous.

Commenting in an editorial on the publication of King Abdullah's memoirs, edited by Philip Graves, the "Guardian" said the position of King Abdullah in the Arab world can be compared to the position of the House of Lancaster in medieval England. It said, "His ancestral home is not Amman but Mecca of which his father was an Emir under the Turks and which he himself used to represent in the Turkish Parliament. And this connection with Mecca gave his family special standing in the eyes of orthodox Moslems." — United Press.

A woman Lee Sum who was charged with receiving stolen property was also discharged, prosecution offering no evidence against her.

Delivery of gold

Lo Kam in evidence said that he was employed by the Sang Cheng Gold dealers. At 12.45 p.m. on May 11 he was instructed to deliver gold to the Man Fat Firm. Three tokis were entrusted with 350 taels of gold. The tokis were Lai Chau (first accused) Man Chan and himself.

Lo said that they were told to bring back $155,550. After this was done the money was divided into three shares. Lo had $50,000, Man Chan $55,520 and Lai Chau $50,000.

The party said Lo then went to Banham Strand and while they were walking, one man came from behind and grabbed hold of him by the neck and pointed a revolver at him. The man then searched him and took away the $50,000.

After evidence had been given by Chan Sin-yu manager of the Sang Cheng Goldsmith Shop and Lin Sai-sip, cashier, hearing of the case was adjourned to 2.30 p.m. today.

New calamities beset Communist China

New calamities have befallen Red China, according to Communist newspaper reports reaching Hong Kong.

The most serious calamity is rain-swollen rivers, which are threatening many parts of the country. The rivers in Kwangtung had already overflowed banks and submerged an estimated 500,000 mow of cultivated land.

Floods are also threatening parts of Northern Kiangsu and Northern Anhwei, while droughts are destroying crops in other parts of the two provinces. In the Tunghsien district, Northern Anhwei, streams and lakes have dried up in the worst drought ever experienced. In two other districts the Communists have organised the farmers into water-carrying teams to ferry water from rivers and lakes miles away to save crops.

Heavy frost is blanketing crops in many areas of the four North China provinces of Honan, Hopei, Pingyuan and Shansi, while wheat jaundice is spreading in most of the wheat-growing districts in Hopei.

The new calamities, coming on the heels of last year's devastations of floods, droughts, pests and storms, which destroyed more than one quarter of the nation's total agricultural output, are posing another serious problem for the new Communist regime.

According to the "Emancipation Daily," the Communist official organ in Shanghai, the Ministry of Interior in Peking made an urgent call to the whole country to step up preventive measures in an effort to avert the new threatening devastation.

The chief Communist official organ, the "People's Daily" in Peking, is reinforcing the Ministry's circular with an editorial appeal, distributed to all parts of the country by the New China News Agency.—United Press.

Appeal to Privy Council in HK tenancy dispute

The Full Court of Appeal yesterday dismissed the appeal brought by the Far East Aviation Company, Ltd., and the Far East Motors, Ltd., against an Appeal Court's decision in upholding a Tenancy Tribunal eviction order against them.

Counsel for appellants yesterday announced they would take the appeal to the Privy Council.

An order for possession in 30 days of the site in question at present occupied by the appellants as well as for mesne profits was made by the Full Court in favour of the respondents, Soares-Alves estates.

The respondents, however, were awarded the costs of the action.

Mr. E. H. Williams, Acting Chief Justice, and the Acting Puisne Judge, Mr. Justice A. D. Scholes, formed the Full Court which upheld the decision of Mr. Justice T. J. Gould, Senior Puisne Judge, who held the appellants had been in breach of a tenancy covenant.

The site in question is situated at the junction of Nathan Road and Middle Road, and is known as 26 Nathan Road. The respondents say they intend building a hotel on the site.

Mr. H. G. Sheldon, KC, and Mr. John McNeill appeared for the appellants, instructed by Johnson, Stokes and Master.

Mr. Leo d'Almada, KC, and Mr. D. A. L. Wright instructed by Mr. A. M. L. Soares and Mr. M. A. da Silva, appeared for Fernando Maria de Lourdes Soares and Alvara Maria de Lourdes Soares, executors of the will of Adao Maria de Lourdes Soares, deceased; and Alberto Maria Alves and Cynthia Maria Alves, executor and executrix of the will of Carmen Soares Alves, deceased.

Court's judgment

In the course of the judgment Mr. Williams stated that the appellants are the tenants of the premises, and the respondents are the landlords.

The ground on which the eviction order was made was that the appellants had failed to observe and perform a stipulation imposing an obligation to vacate the premises.

Going briefly into the facts, Mr. Williams said that on February 19, 1946, the appellants entered into an agreement to lease the lot concerned. A condition was that at the expiration of the term, the tenants — the appellants — should remove all buildings erected by them at their own expense.

Upon termination of this term, the respondents called upon the appellants to remove the structures on the land. The appellants refused, with the result that the Soares-Alves estates applied for eviction under section 18 (d) of the Ordinance, which order was accordingly made.

A breach

The question for the opinion of the Full Court, Mr. Williams went on, was whether on the facts the Tribunal was right in law in making an eviction order under the sub-section in question.

After going through the various legal arguments submitted by counsel for both sides in this connection, the Acting Chief Justice stated that if the tenant has broken a condition of his agreement, other than a condition imposing an obligation to vacate the premises, then the landlord must be given an order for possession, even though the Tribunal might think it was unreasonable to make the order.

In the present case, Mr. Williams continued, there has been a breach of the covenant entitling the landlord to an order for possession.

"In our opinion," the Court concluded, "the Tribunal was right in law in making the eviction order."

The Philippines Foreign Office is considering continuing its military attaches in Taipeh, Hong Kong and Bangkok.

FIRST AID FOR Acid Indigestion

ARGOS HILL SEAMEN FOUND NOT GUILTY

"The voyages contemplated in the Articles of Agreement signed by the accused were normal trading voyages and the risk that the accused were required to take not being a commercial risk in a voyage such as the Articles contemplated they were justified in disobeying the order of the Master to proceed on that voyage."

Thus said Mr. James Wicks in a judgment handed down at Kowloon yesterday finding the 19 seamen of the ss. Argos Hill not guilty on a charge of combining to disobey a lawful command of the master of the ship to put out to sea.

The seamen, 11 Europeans and eight Arabs, were alleged to have refused to sail for the Port of Tsingtao after the Counties Ship Management Company (London) vessel arrived here on June 7 with a cargo of cotton from Karachi.

The seamen charged were Ahmed Mohsin, fireman; Ahmed Ali, fireman; Sale Hassan, greaser; Guid Saleh, fireman; Abdullah Sallam, Cook; Mohamed Abdullah, fireman; Kaid Ghaleb, greaser; Said Ali, greaser; Marcel Roger Anthony Lawrence, steward; Alfred Jones, steward; Patrick Anthony Hynes, able seaman; James Dunne, able seaman; James Hutton, able seaman; Robert Collie, fifth engineer; Donald Brierley, steward boy; William Lemmens, ordinary seaman; Danny Booker, ordinary seaman; Michael O'Leary, able seaman; and Alvern McGuiness, able seaman.

Mr. A. Hooton, Crown Counsel, assisted by Inspector C. Pile of the Marine Police, prosecuted, while Mr. V. L. J. D'Alton, instructed by Mr. J. C. Stewart, represented all the defendants. Mr. F. D. Hammond held a watching brief on behalf of Dodwell and Company, the ship's agents.

Mr. Wicks' judgment reads as follows:

"In this case Ahmed Mohsin and 18 others stand charged with one count, that of combining to disobey the lawful command of the Master of the ss. Argos Hill. The accused are all members of the crew of that ship, which anchored in Kowloon Bay during the evening of June 7, 1950. Mr. Hooton, Crown Counsel, appears for the prosecution and Mr. D'Alton, instructed by Mr. Stewart, appears for the accused.

Facts simple

"The facts are simple and not in dispute. The ss. Argos Hill is an ocean going ship of 10,000 tons deadweight. The ship's Articles of Agreement were opened in Liverpool, England, on July 1, 1949, and 17 of the accused signed on, some on July 1, 1949, the others on the following day. The ship sailed from Liverpool on July 4, 1949, and Abdullah Sallam, the fifth accused and William Lemmens the 16th accused, signed the same Articles whilst the ship was in the Port of Aden on October 22 and 25, 1949, respectively.

"After a number of voyages which included visits to such ports as Keelung, Rangoon, Yokohama and San Francisco, a full cargo of cotton was loaded at Karachi destined for Hong Kong and Tsingtao. On arrival in Hong Kong the Master, Captain Mallett, received instructions to retain on board the cargo manifested to Hong Kong and deliver part of this to Dairen the remainder to Tsingtao and to sail for the latter port at 6 p.m. on the following day.

"The accused first voiced their doubt as to the safety of the voyage to Tsingtao whilst the ship was still in Karachi, immediately after they became aware of the ship's destination. They continuously maintained that there was some danger of attack or capture, arising from the Civil War, involved in the voyage, and the matter came to a head when Sub-Inspector Pile in the Captain's cabin on board the ss. Argos Hill put the question to each of the accused: Are you willing to sail?, and Captain Mallett, put the question 'If I ring stand by will you be willing to sail within the hour?' Each of the accused replied 'No' to these questions, and as a consequence, they must be taken to have combined together to refuse to obey the command of the Master.

A precedent

"The question now is, were the accused justified in disobeying the order to proceed on the voyage from Hong Kong to Tsingtao? It is not disputed that some risk is involved in such a voyage, and the answer to the above question appears to be in whether or not this risk is a commercial risk in a voyage such as was contemplated by the Articles.

"The law involved in the charge brought against the accused was examined in great detail by the House of Lords in the Palaced Shipping Co. Ltd. v. Caine (1907) A. C. 386, which case concerned seamen who refused, for a reason somewhat similar to that in this case, to take a cargo of coal from Hong Kong to Sasebo in Japan, Japan then being at war with Russia, and in Robson v. Sykes (1938) 2 A. E. R. 612 where it was decided that the same principle applied where the risk arose out of a civil war.

"The principle, which I have extracted from the Judgment of Lord Atkinson in Caine's Case, is that where a voyage is across seas which are the theatre of war, to a port belonging to one of the belligerents, and is therefore likely to be the object of such surveillance and attack as the other belligerent is able to subject it to, or direct against it, that voyage is prima facie not an ordinary commercial voyage of a peaceful nature. The burden of rebutting the prima facie presumption above mentioned rests on the owners of the ship or their agents and that burden is not discharged by proving that, from the reputed disposition and condition of the armed forces of that belligerent from which attack is apprehended, there is no risk of attack at all. The risk of attack is a question of degree to be determined in each case on its own special facts.

Only one answer

"Good faith is a necessary element and seamen are entitled to form their decision upon such general information as is at their disposal. The defence put in evidence certain reports published in the Hong Kong Press which clearly come within the category of 'general information.' In particular, reference was made to the 'South China Morning Post' of March 1, 1950 where it was reported that on February 20, 1950, the Isbrandtsen ship "Flying Clipper" and the United States Lines Co. ship "Pioneer Dale" were bombed and strafed whilst in the Port of Tsingtao by three planes.

"The Prosecution do not contend that an attack on Tsingtao is not possible today. It is unnecessary for me to refer to the numerous other items of general information submitted, for, on the item of general information regarding the Port to which the accused were ordered to sail their ship alone, there can only be one answer—the risk involved in a voyage to a port in which merchant ships have less than four months before been bombed and strafed, the position today approximating to that at the time of the attack, cannot be considered a commercial risk in a normal trading voyage. The voyages contemplated in the Articles of Agreement signed by the accused were normal trading voyages and the risk that the accused were required to take not being a commercial risk in a voyage such as the Articles contemplated they were justified in disobeying the order of the Master to proceed on that voyage.

"Mr. Hillyer, the Shipping Master for the Port of Hong Kong, informed the Court that the Articles of Agreement signed by the accused were almost identical to those used in Hong Kong under the Merchant Shipping Ordinance, 1899.

Quite different

"Articles of agreement constitute a contract between the parties and when seamen sign Articles in Hong Kong for voyages to ports in China they must, from the same general information that was available to the defendants in this case, know what is involved and it may well be that the extra risks and dangers are accepted and in the contemplation of the parties at the time when they enter into their contracts. The same position may, it is possible, also result if Articles are signed in England specifically for a voyage to a named port in China, in which case the parties could be said to have contracted on the basis of a knowledge of the risks and dangers involved in the voyage.

"It is quite different in a case such as is before the Court of standard Articles of Agreement signed in England for a number of years, for normal trading voyages, no ports being specified.

"The Captain of the ss. Argos Hill was put in an impossible position when his ship was chartered for this voyage to Tsingtao. He commanded a ship manned by a reasonably happy crew, and there was nothing he could do if his men refused to proceed on a voyage which was outside the scope of the Articles.

"The Accused are found not guilty and discharged."

Police raid morphine den

A raid carried out by the Flying Squad led by Detective Sub-Inspector James Wicks resulted in the appearance of three men before Mr. J. Reynolds at Central yesterday charged with smoking morphine.

Defendants, Li Fu-kan, Tio Hung-po and Sam Siu-kee, pleaded guilty to a charge of smoking morphine and were each fined $200 or two months hard labour.

DSI James Martin for the prosecution said that the Flying Squad led by himself raided No 9 Water Street. Between the staircase of the second and third floors they arrested the three defendants, who were found smoking morphine.

A fine of $2,500 or six months hard labour was imposed on Cheung Chung-li by Mr. Reynolds when he pleaded guilty to a charge of possession of dangerous drugs (morphine) under the Dangerous Drugs Ordinance.

DSI Martin said that the Flying Squad raided No. 19 New Street first floor on Monday night and arrested defendant.

A police informer bought a small packet of morphine from defendant for $50. Three and a half taels of morphine, valued at $1,500, seized by the police were ordered to be confiscated. Defendant had been in the Colony for eight years.

Defendant said that the morphine was for his own consumption.

Charged with possession of arms and ammunition and possession of dangerous goods, Chan Chuen, owner of cargo junk T2286H, was fined $1,750 or 18 months' hard labour by Mr. F. X. d'Almada at Kowloon yesterday.

Sub-Inspector K. C. Cheng stated that on June 24 when police boarded defendant's junk in Deep Bay they found on board a rifle, 83 rounds of ammunition, 23 detonators and 10 dynamite bombs.

Manslaughter trial enters second day

The manslaughter trial of Cheung Dik-chan, Chinese stage and screen actress, entered its second day yesterday with further prosecution evidence being given.

The accused, who is defended by Mr. B. A. Bernacchi, is alleged to have unlawfully killed a cyclist, Ho Kwan-lun, while driving a Buick on April 18 in Kowloon.

Cheung is being tried before Mr. Justice T. J. Gould, Senior Puisne Judge, and a jury of six men and one woman.

The prosecutor is Mr. M. Heenan, Crown Counsel, who is assisted by Detective Sub-Inspector B.F. Slevin.

Wilkinson and Grist are instructing Mr. Bernacchi for the defence.

Yesterday morning, the Court and the jury went from the Supreme Court across the harbour over to the junction of Prince Edward Road and Waterloo Road near the St. Teresa's Church to view the area of the alleged offence.

When Court reassembled at the Supreme Court later on, the cross-examination took place of Sub-Inspector K.W. Chan, the police officer who did the measuring of the various distances involved in the vicinity of the incident.

Questioned on the subject of the cycle track by the side of Prince Edward Road, witness agreed with defence counsel that there was nothing to prevent cars from going along that lane. It might have been used by cyclists for their convenience, he asserted, but he did not think it was built for their own particular use.

Asked as to the manner in which he got a statement from the accused at the traffic office immediately after the incident, Sub-Inspector Chan said this was taken partly through his questioning and partly on her own volition.

She did not appear at the time to be in a dazed condition, witness said. There was, however, an interval in the course of the making of the statement when the accused's nose started to bleed.

Witness denied the answers he got were as a result of suggestions he put to Cheung.

Soldier testifies

The next witness was Sergeant W. A. Turnbull of the 6th Anti-Aircraft Battery, RA, who testified that he saw on the day in question a green Buick going across Prince Edward Road and hitting the side of the church wall while he himself was being driven inside a military vehicle.

There was a man half-way on the top of the car bonnet, witness stated, and this man fell off the Buick as it hit the wall. Sergeant Turnbull said he then ordered his own car stopped, and got off. A man, and a woman whom he yesterday identified as the accused, were inside the Buick. An injured man and a bicycle were lying on the other side of the road.

Private D. Leeman, RASC, gave evidence as to having seen a car going along the cycle track with a bicycle going down on the right side of the car. At the time, he was on the upper deck of a No. 1 Route Bus travelling towards Nathan Road.

Under cross-examination, witness said that, from where he sat in the bus, he could not see whether the bicycle was toward the front, by the side, or along the rear of the car, as the bus was a little distance behind.

It was the bicycle that first drew his attention to the happenings outside, witness disclosed. When he saw the bicycle it was already empty and was in the act of going down.

After further evidence by other witnesses, the trial was adjourned until 10 a.m. today.

X. d'Almada at Kowloon yesterday on two counts of being found in an enclosed premises for an unlawful purpose and disturbing the occupants of flat 25, Government Quarters, King's Park.

Inspector J. H. Evans, prosecuting, alleged that defendant on Monday morning went inside No. 3 Block, Government Quarters, and later knocked on the doors and peered through the windows of flat No. 25, belonging to Mrs. J. C. Myers.

Defendant pleaded that he was under the influence of liquor at the time.

KAI TAK TOPICS

People at Kai Tak airport yesterday were interested in the news that two Chinese children would travel unaccompanied on a Pan American World Airways plane to Honolulu to join their parents there.

As soon as the two children, Tseng Chou-yin, aged 3, and her brother Tseng Yue-hung, aged 5, arrived at the waiting room with their uncle, they were surrounded by PAA officials and passengers.

The Tsengs were in Nanking before the city fell to the Communists. Mr. Tseng Kwan-yung a businessman and father of the two children brought his whole family to Hong Kong in early 1949. Mr. Tseng then went to Honolulu where he has been staying since more than a year ago.

Meanwhile, the two children were left in Hong Kong where they have been looked after by their uncle. They boarded the PAA plane yesterday afternoon and were seen off at the airport by a group of their relatives.

Also boarding the same plane for Manila yesterday were the Chung Hua Girls Basketball Team who arrived in the Colony on June 11 and had won all the six games played here.

Two veteran Philippine consular officials will join the Philippine Consulate-General here at the end of the month, according to Mr. J. V. Rodriguez, Philippine Consul-General here, who was at the airport yesterday to meet his wife, Mrs. Milagros G. Rodriguez, travelling from Manila in a Philippine Air Lines plane.

The new officials will be Mr Vicente Singian, Consul, who was formerly Philippine Consul in Amoy, and Mr. Aurelio Ramos Vice-Consul, who was formerly Philippine Vice-Consul in San Francisco.

Mr. Vittorio Strigarri, Italian Consul-General in Hong Kong, arrived in Hong Kong yesterday by PAA plane from Manila.

MANY declarers have a tendency to play for their contracts according to the first method which promises success if a certain key card of the defender happens to be in a particular place. Others study the situation to see if there is not some manner of procedure which will succeed against any locations of such a card or cards. Obviously the latter habit is better, and over the long run produces lots of victories which would be defeats by the other way.

The declarer on this deal used to be one of those rapid-fire players who followed the first course he saw which might make his contract. He has cured himself of that weakness, and his new thoroughness paid dividends on this deal.

After West led the diamond Q South noted that he was sure to lose one trick in trumps, either one or two in clubs and possibly one or two in spades. Winning the first trick with the diamond K, he promptly led a heart, which East won with the A, returning the diamond 2 to the A. Now the diamond 9 was ruffed, the heart 9 led to the 10 to clear trumps and the club 7 led in the hope that West had the A. That developed and then the J was sent to the K.

Certain to lose one trick in spades and unable to afford more, South did not reply on the Q finesse, as he would have done about a year before. He instead made his contract a sure thing. First he ruffed out the last club from dummy, then led the spade 2. He did not finesse the Q, but stuck in the 9 after West played low. That enabled East to take the trick cheaply, with the lowly 10. But now notice that poor fellow's predicament. If he returned a minor suit card, it would give South a discard of his second spade while he ruffed in dummy. The alternative, however, was just as bad, a lead away from the spade K into the A-Q. Seeing his goose was cooked, East conceded the rest of the tricks and showed his hand.

EXTERNAL AID KEY TO ASIA ECONOMIC REHABILITATION

Lake Success, June 26.

External aid in the form of capital investment, loans and technical help, coupled with more effective mobilisation of domestic resources is still the key to the economic rehabilitation of Asia and the Far East, according to a United Nations economic survey just issued here.

The present financial resources of the Economic Commission for Asia and the Far East region are being stretched to the limit and internal strife and political instability imposed heavy burdens upon the under-developed economies of the region, the report said.

While the population had increased, agricultural production was still eight per cent below the pre-war level and food was still the basic want of the region.

"Without larger capital investment in agriculture, industry, transport and other public utilities and considerable expenditure in social services, no increase in the standard of living of the people is possible," the report declared.

As regards industrial and mineral production, the region showed marked improvement despite a fall in the textile production in India and a decline under most categories in China.

The report said that Japanese machinery exports to the ECAFE countries—10 times what they were in 1948—were significant and Japan was gradually replacing the United States as a primary supplier of the region.

The 500-page report is in two parts—a review of the economic development of the ECAFE region during the past year and an appraisal of the method of economic recovery open to the region.

More investment needed

Dr. P. S. Lokrnathan, Executive Secretary of the Economic Commission for Asia and the Far East, in a preface to the report, said that for the next five years it would take all the available resources of the region to maintain present levels of production and consumption.

The report said that plans for the economic development of Asia and the Far East, which had been somewhat unrealistic in the past, had been reviewed by most countries in 1949 and interest in the United Nations' expanded programme of assistance and in the United States programme of aid has been very general all over the Far East.

It was realised that without a great increase in investment there could be neither adequate rehabilitation nor rapid progress and agricultural and industrial production would not be able to catch up with the population increases.

Setting out the encouraging aspects of the recovery made in 1949, the report said that mineral and industrial production had improved. So also had transport and, to a lesser degree, agricultural production.

"Devaluation of most of the currencies of the region exerted a favourable influence, although it is too early to trace the full effects."

Japanese trade

Japanese production of such items as electricity, iron, steel, cement, machinery and chemicals exceeded that of all ECAFE countries taken together by one to 6.5 times, the report said.

Japan's increased trade with ECAFE countries was gradually replacing the United States as a primary supplier of the region.

Japan's share in the imports from the region had increased from 2.4 per cent in 1948 to 3.6 per cent in 1949 while the United States' share had remained steady at 24.0 per cent.

—ECAFE countries in 1949—imported from Japan 10 times as much machinery as in 1948 whereas the corresponding increase in machinery imports from the United States and Britain were 11 and 13 per cent respectively.

—As a whole the ECAFE region (excluding China, Nepal and British Borneo) had a trade deficit of $1,767,000,000 in 1949 as compared to $1,262,000,000 in the previous year.

Eighty per cent of the trade deficit in 1948 and 85 per cent in 1949 were increased by Japan, the Philippines and Korea, the magnitude of the deficits being in the order given.

The report declared that with American aid to Japan, the Philippines and Korea, British Sterling releases to India, Pakistan and Ceylon, and French and Dutch aid to Indo-China and Indonesia, it was possible for these countries to balance their international accounts and arrest the course of post-war inflation.—Reuter

AFRICAN WORKERS' GESTURE

Johannesburg, June 26.

Thousands of non-Europeans staying away from work in protest against the South African Government's racial policy and Anti-Communist Bill, dislocated business at Port Elizabeth today.

Only nine of the hundreds employed at the harbour arrived for work this morning. They were told to go home again.

About three-quarters of the non-European members of the railway staff went on strike. Railways managed to keep to schedule with depleted staffs.

In the Johannesburg area, and other parts of the Union comparatively few people obeyed the summons to keep today as a "national day of mourning."

A few incidents were reported from the Johannesburg area and none from the other parts of the Union.

A Chinese shop in the African township of Newclare was set on fire and damaged early in the day.

Children on their way to school this morning were turned back in some cases by non-Europeans in the streets.

Threats to burn down schools were also reported.

The entire Witwatersrand police force was on duty all day, ready for any possible violence, and an army unit was standing by here to support the police if called upon.

The "national day of mourning" was called by the African National Congress. It appeared to have been observed mostly by Indians.—Reuter.

FORCE IN KOREA

The Security Council has spoken quickly. It has denounced North Korea as the aggressor, called for the withdrawal of their troops, and ordered a cease-fire. The President of North Korea has ordered his troops to carry on till South Korea has been smashed. Once more we see that we live in an age of force and that the age of reason, hailed so mistily by the French revolutionaries at its inception a century before the first world war, really has ended.

The only great decisions made in our time by reason were those of Attlee and Mountbatten in India, Burma and Ceylon. In China, in Indonesia, in Greece, in Malaya, in Indo-China, in the Near East, and in the satellite countries of Eastern Europe force was the major factor—sometimes hidden, more often revealed. It was the manifest will to resist with force that enabled the West to maintain the airlift and preserve their position in Berlin and therefore in Western Germany. The Kremlin wanted to take them over and would have had no compunction whatever about doing so; only fear of the consequences stayed its hand.

None of the recriminations or inquests now going on in the United States will be of the least value unless the stark fact is squarely faced that the cause is only good or bad if weakness makes it so. The age is amoral. The Communists pose on a pinnacle and are destitute of morality. Like Hitler, they began this onslaught with a lie. It is the only sign of weakness they show, and it exists only because there is an uneasy consciousness of the fate that has in the end been visited upon aggressors. Hitler, Tojo, and Mussolini are only just round the corner of the tumultuous history of our time. They attack just the same, when they believe they can get away with it, for it is a militant creed for all that it professes to abhor force and aggression as the weapons of "Fascist beasts."

In Korea, of course, force met force. Both sides had been armed and equipped by their patrons. A question that arises is whether those peoples of Asia who have long been subject races or have a long tradition of autocratic rule, are really ready to fight for their newfound freedom—as ready to fight for it as they were to clamour for it. The example of events in China, especially the collapse of the huge Nationalist Army, has had a profound effect in this respect. Too much old may still go down the drain—let's cut the risk in half: that is the inclination. It is not easy at this early stage to determine whether lack of faith and poverty of will, or inadequate armament of the defenders, is chiefly responsible for the swift advance of the invaders of South Korea. But it is a question that must also be examined and answered.

Certainly the South Korean forces were not as well armed as their fellow-countrymen from across the border. And that may well have been due to the doubt about the answer to this very question as much as to the tardiness of action in Congress and the fret and fury that surround the play of Party politics on foreign policy. A month ago six United States' Ambassadors sent statements to Congress urging authorization of a large vote for the Mutual Defence Assistance programme. The Ambassador to South Korea was one of the six. He listed the priorites of American policy in Korea as (1) political support; (2) economic assistance; (3) vigorous information and education programmes; and (4) "as a final step," military aid.

The Ambassador then stressed what he called "the unique, compelling urgency which attaches to the military assistance requirements" of the Republic, because it was confronted all along its border with an aggressive, Soviet-dominated Communist regime publicly committed to the destruction of the Republic, by force of arms if necessary. Equipment had been supplied to the replacement value of $56 millions, but "the undeniable military superiority of the North Korean forces would provide North Korea with the margin of victory in the event of a full-scale invasion. Such superiority is particularly evident in the matter of heavy infantry support weapons, tanks, and combat aircraft with which the U.S.S.R. has supplied and continues to supply its Korean puppet."

On the face of it, both this statement, and the rapid advance in South Korea of the invaders, imply that the Soviet did a more thorough job of it in preparing, training and especially in equipping the North. Even so, the South Koreans did have enough men and arms to put up considerable resistance. If they do not, if their heart is not in it, the conclusions must be faced. We must do the job where it must be done, at least with a hard core of our own forces, as it is being done in Malaya and, with even greater difficulty, in Indo-China. In this matter Japan is not less vital than Western Germany.

THE LABOUR PAMPHLET

By "Windrush"
special correspondent

This has been the week of the great explosion over the Labour Party pamphlet on European unity. By the time this article reaches Hong Kong the excitement will probably have died down. But it would be quite wrong to think of the uproar as a storm in a tea-cup. It has been a revealing incident. A lot of things have become clear which were not clear before.

Consider the situation as it was just before the document was published. The prestige of the Government was standing higher than at any time since the general election. Anxiety over the dollar crisis was fading out of the air. (It may revive quite quickly. The crisis is not over). But people were willing to give the Labour Government the credit for the present alleviation. If there had been an election at this time, the Government might have improved its position considerably.

Then, on Tuesday, June 13, came the awful blunder. On that day it had been unable to accept the Schuman proposals. On the same day Mr. Attlee was to make a statement in the House of Commons. The Government's case was a good one. It was supported by nearly all the Press. France had asked us to bind ourselves in advance to putting the control of our steel industry under a supra-national body whose composition and constitution was quite unexplained. No British Government responsible to the electorate could possibly have committed itself to a measure whose nature was thus undefined.

It was all very well to say that in the interests of European unity the British Government ought to have taken a risk. But what was the risk? We were being asked to turn over the control of iron and steel to an international body which would thenceforward be beyond the control of the British Government and electorate. This body would have great powers. It might, for example, decide to cut down quite steeply the steel production in Great Britain, thus causing heavy unemployment. Or it might reduce British wages in the steel industry to the same level as those in France. And the British Government would be unable to intervene. So would all the Governments of West Europe. The essence of the French plan was that the iron and steel authority should be above governments. But how it was to be constituted was not explained.

The pamphlet

Nobody could blame the British Government for rejecting such a radical plan. It did not refuse at all to consider all schemes for internationalising iron and steel. It said only that it could not bind itself to accept a plan before the plan had been set out in black and white; and was unwilling to contemplate an international authority which was not in the last resort under control of the governments of West Europe.

All this was explained, moderately and with good humour, in the White paper. But then the Labour Government threw away its whole case. For on the same day that the White Paper was published the Labour Party issued its pamphlet on European unity. Now this pamphlet has certainly had a rather worse Press than it deserved. Taken as a whole it was not the crude thing which it was reported to be in the American Press. It contained something which was true. But unfortunately it contained also passages which made it quite clear that the Labour Party was unwilling to co-operate in international economic projects which were not made by Socialist governments.

It is understandable that America should have reacted violently. There is in any case a deep suspicion in America of British Socialism—partly out of fear that America will become "infected." There is also the suspicion that Britain is sabotaging the attempts at European federation. America thinks that it knows what Europe needs: if Europe would follow the American example and federate its States, all would be well. America is inclined to think that one of the chief obstacles to this is stubborn British nationalism unwilling to surrender sovereignty.

Sad truth

What the publication of the Labour pamphlet did was to fuse these two suspicions. Labour Britain appeared to be saying that it would consider federal projects—but only with Socialist States.

The storm will die soon. Later American comment has been less violent. It has been realised that the earlier Press reports gave a one-sided view of the document. But the question remains: Why did the Labour Party do anything so inept as to allow its pamphlet to be published on the very day that it would do most damage to the national interests?

The sad answer seems to be that the Labour Party is even more inept in matters of this kind than was thought possible. The pamphlet was prepared by the International Sub-Committee of the Labour Party executive. Some months ago there was a feeling in the Party that it would be a good thing for its propaganda if it published a statement on foreign policy. The inadequacy of its treatment of foreign policy in its election manifesto had been widely commented on. So the Party's research officers were turned loose on drafting a statement. Probably most of the work was done by Mr. Denis Healey. The draft was passed by the international sub-committee before ever the Schuman Plan was put forward. Was the draft seen by the full Labour executive? Nobody knows the answer. Probably it was circulated. But many of the members of the Executive are not very much interested in foreign policy. Those who are interested are, like the Prime Minister, very busy men. If they received the draft, it is doubtful if they read it.

Two questions

Whatever the explanation, the document was passed for publication. They party officials responsible were anxious to get their work published as quickly as possible. Is there not such a thing as pride of authorship?

The printers and binders had finished their work by June 13. So the pamphlet was issued on that day. Nearly everybody in the Labour Party executive had forgotten about it. Only one Minister can be said quite certainly to have remembered what it contained, and its implications. That was Dr. Dalton, who has a certain genius for precipitating unhappy incidents of the kind which followed.

That, almost unbelievable as it is, seems to be the history of this international sensation. The country is now asking two questions. The first, the lesser one, is: What is the relation of the Labour Party Executive and the Labour Government. The graver question is this. If a Party is capable of such a grave blunder, is it really capable of governing? So the ground which the Labour Government had been recovering it has now lost again abruptly.

Cockney Len--boss of Canadian boom town

Redwater, Alberta.

Len Walker from Hounslow jerked a Cockney thumb at the mud-logged street of wooden shacks outside the window and said:

"See that mess, chum? It's soon going to be cleared up now—and that will be all thanks to the oil."

We were sitting in the "bear room" of the little hotel at Redwater, the fabulous township 35 miles North East of Edmonton, where the world's largest oil discoveries for years are now being made.

A notice on the door said: "Miners and Indians prohibited." Packing the tables were hulking oilfield workers in gay checked lumber jackets, putting down pints of the local drink called "red eye," a half-and-half mixture of beer and tomato juice.

I had motored out to talk to Len Walker, recently appointed first Mayor of Redwater, as part of a detailed study I have been making of the great Western Canadian "oil rush," which, in Alberta alone, has already revealed natural resources estimated at over £330,000,000.

It has turned Canada almost overnight into the largest oil producer in the British Empire, and is expected to make her in the coming years one of the world's great Industrial Powers.

Every day of the week, Sundays included, about 2,100,000 gallons of oil are now gushing out of Alberta wells.

This figure will be doubled as soon as construction is completed, early next year, of the 1,500-mile pipeline which is being built at a cost of £30,000,000 to link the oilfields with the Great Lakes and the markets of the East.

Typical story

Len walker's own story is typical of the way in which the great hunt for "black gold," still being carried on by more than 160 large and small Canadian and American companies, is changing the fortunes of many men.

"I'm a proper Londoner. I am," said Len. "Vicarage-lane, Hounslow, was my home, and my dad was on the old District Railway for years, in the season-ticket office at the Mansion House.

"I was a clerk on the London Stock Exchange until I got fed up waiting for promotion. One day I realised that I should have to wait for 15 chaps ahead of me to die before I'd get anywhere.

"So I chucked it and came out to Canada. I landed with £1 in my pocket way back in 1905.

"Since then I've done just about everything — digging ditches, logging, farming. And now the pay-off comes."

He owns the land

Len, at 62, works as cashier in the Redwater hotel. But on his farm outside the township there are nine of the 400 wells so far sunk in the Redwater area.

Like most of the farmers around, Len owns only the land, while the mineral rights are held by the lucky Alberta Government.

But the farmers get paid fees and rents for the land on which the wells are sunk. Len's estimate was: "It should mean a tidy

By Gordon Young

£10,000 or so to me before we're through."

As a rugged individualist, Len has no kick against the fact that Canada's oil miracle has been wrought by adventurous prospectors working for oil companies under private enterprise, and not under State control.

"Just look at the money they've had to put in before they could take anything out," said he.

This year the oil companies are spending an estimated £50,000,000 on exploration and exploitation of the 125,000,000 acres of possible oil and gas sites in Alberta, British Columbia, Saskatchewan, and elsewhere. And the battle to locate the present rich pastures has been a hard one.

Originally, during the war, the only considerable source of fuel for the Canadian war effort was one oilfield at Turner Valley, 25 miles South West of Calgary, which by 1942 was already starting to decline.

Lucky strike

In the next five years oil prospectors, some of them large companies, some small, "wild-cat" operators, spent millions of pounds in the search for new oil sources.

One company, Imperial Oil, alone fruitlessly drilled 114 "dry holes," at a cost of anything upwards of £13,000 apiece. Discouraged by failure, many prospectors just cut their losses and withdrew.

Then came the lucky strike. On February 13, 1947, an Imperial Oil drilling team, boring into a a core of prehistoric coral reef at Leduc, 20 miles South-West of Edmonton, struck a gusher which opened up the greatest oil discovery of that year and inaugurated the oil rush which is still going on.

Today Leduc has over 350 oil wells, and its reserves are estimated at about 9,000,000,000 gallons.

Geologists think that the oil-bearing coral reef of Leduc, believed to be half a billion years old, links up with oilfields which lie buried from North to South across the North American continent.

Other discoveries followed rapidly, with Redwater—found in September 1948—as the greatest of them all.

Today, within 45 miles of the city of Edmonton, there are more than 900 wells already in production.

So down here in Redwater Mayor Len Walker surveys with pride the revolution which oil is bringing to the prairies. He led me to the muddy main street outside the door of the hotel.

"Two years ago," he said, "there was nothing out here at all except the grain elevators on the Canadian National Railway line, where the farmers shipped away their wheat.

"Now we're going to make a proper township out of this place. We've already got this hotel, three cinemas, a school, shops, and drug stores.

"See that wooden shack across the field It's a Waveright beauty parlour—for even the women can come here now.

Local newspaper

"In that little hut down the street Eddit Arrol and his wife are bringing out our own local newspaper, the Redwater News—and they've already got more than 150 paid subscriptions.

"Our population here has jumped from 250 before the oil to 1,500 now. We're getting electric lights, paved streets—all the trimmings.

"We've got our own Mounties, too, under Corporal 'T-bone' Tait—he came out here from Denholm, Scotland, in 1927, and he's been 15 years in the force."

Mayor Walker shook my hand. "Well, so long for now. Mind you get my name right—Leonard Arthur Walker—the initials spell LAW—see."

'HELP KOREA' DEMAND

Invasion a deliberate defiance of the UN

DEBATE IN U.S. SENATE

London, June 26.

Non-Communists throughout the world today called for full aid to Southern Korea.

The Australian External Affairs Minister, Mr. Percy Spender, called it a deliberate, direct defiance of the will of all but one group of United Nations members.

Most Communist sources kept silent on the fighting though when they did mention it they accused the South Koreans of attacking the North Koreans.

Those advocating full aid for South Korea included the head of the International Council of Christian Churches, a Protestant body whose American groups count about 1,500,000 members of 15 denominations.

Its President, Dr. Carl McIntyre, cabled to President Truman strongly urging all-out United States support, including arms, planes and men for Southern Korea.

The "Washington Post" said, "The danger to world peace in this explosive situation can be overcome if assistance is prompt and if the Koreans can and will do their part and if the Soviet objective is simply to feel out the American intention.

"It is always possible, of course, that the Muscovites will overstep the mark and precipitate a general war."

The "New York Times" said that the Soviet puppets in North Korea had set a match to a powder train and the world's major concern now was whether a universal conflagration could be avoided.

Senators angry

In Washington, Senator Tom Connally, Democrat, Texas, told a grim and angry Senate today that freed moving nations might act over and above the United Nations if necessary to check Communist agression.

The chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee spoke of the possibility during a general debate on the Communist invasion of South Korea.

Choosing his words carefully, Mr. Connally did not go into what that action might be. He cautioned against any hasty action until the United Nations Security Council meets again tomorrow on the Korean situation.

Senator William Knowland, Republican Californin, asked Senator Connally if he thought the invasion could be settled by a resolution.

Mr. Connally replied that it was true that an invasion could not be stopped by a resolution and that the United Nations had no armed forces of its own.

But the United Nations, he said, does have authority to ask its members to supply troops if it determined that the use of troops is necessary.

Senator Knowland suggested that the Russians might use their veto to block such a United Nations move. "In such an event", he asked, "should we sit back and twiddle our thumbs?"

Mr. Connally said some nations other than Russia might do a little vetoing and might together pursue a course over and above the United Nations.

Mr. Connally went on to say that President Harry Truman will decide what to do about Korea on the basis of what is best for American integrity, security and interests.

Should establish a line

"If Senators will just be patient a little while we shall come to a decision in which the Republicans will have just as much influence as the Democrats," Mr. Connally said.

Senator Styles Bridges (Republican, New Hampshire) told the Senate that the United States should call the Kremlin's "bluff" and establish a line against Communism all over the world.

Such a course was a calculated risk but he contended that it offered the best way to prevent outright war with Russia.

The only course open to the U.S. was to "announce that we will not let Soviet Russia's—call it Communistic—influence penetrate South Korea."

Senator Herbert Lehman urged "all possible aid to help the Koreans throw back this invasion. Calling upon the United States to give the United Nations a "chance to mobilise the world's strength against this threat of peace", he said: "Let us exhaust every resource to keep the world from the calamity of war. We must show strength and courage."

Senator Knowland said that if South Korea fell it would be catastrophic and probably would lead the way to Communist conquest of all Asia. He called for getting military equipment to South Korea at once.

"No trembling"

Representative Harold Velde (Rep) believed the U.S. should defend South Korea "right now with arms and men". The difficulty in Korea and in China could be attributed to the State Department's bowing to Russian demands at the Yalta, Teheran and San Francisco conferences. He added, "This country must take decisive action and right now."

Senator Connally said the U.S. was not going to "tremble like a psychopath before the Russians". He described the Korean war as a plain and aggravated case of the type the United Nations was created to handle.

Senator Alexander Wiley (Rep) said the Senate should keep calm until it had all the facts. Constantly dwelling on past mistakes was not going to help in the present situation unless the nation could profit from those mistakes.

Representative Charles Eaton, Republican member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, said: "The Russian Government has no more morals than a tiger and the only way to face a tiger is with a gun."

The Senate Appropriations Committee later summoned the head of the Intelligence Service to answer charges that the United States Intelligence was caught flatfooted by the Korean invasion.

Intelligence chief's report

Rear-Admiral Roscoe Hillenkoetter, the nation's intelligence chief, was said to have told the Senators that his agency reported unusual troop concentrations in North Korea before the outbreak of war there.

Admiral Hillenkoetter, who heads the central intelligence agency, was called before the Senate Appropriations Committee to answer charges by some Republicans that the North Korean attack caught American espionage agents flatfooted.

A Committee member, who asked not to be named, said Admiral Hillenkoetter read from a series of reports on troop concentrations in Northern Korea. Admiral Hillenkoetter's reports presumably were made to Defence and State Department leaders.

The Committee member said his testimony implied that evaluation of the facts his agency gathered was the responsibility of the armed services. The informant considered the Admiral's statements in conflict with those of the Secretary of State, Dean Acheson, and the Defence Secretary, Louis Johnson, to whom the North Korean invasion had been an entire surprise.

Admiral Hillenkoetter said the Korean invasion had been expected for a year, but it was impossible to predict specific timing. He called on President Truman to bring him up to date on the Korean situation.

Admiral Hillenkoetter said his agency "gets a great deal of its information from General MacArthur's military intelligence, but it also has its own operatives".—Reuter Associated Press and United Press.

Russian attitude of "neutrality"

Moscow, June 26.

The Soviet Government is expected to take a neutral non-intervention position regarding Korea's civil war, according to observers here. The fighting is considered purely an internal affair of the Korean nation.

Moscow has made its position clear many times in the past that it did not consider itself bound by any rulings taken by the United Nations Commission to Korea, which it has never regarded as a legal body.—United Press.

World's markets nervous

London, June 26.

World markets today treated the Korean developments as a major scare. Nearly all non-Communist countries had slumps on the Stock Exchanges and booms in gold and commodities, particularly in rubber and tin, for which the world largely depends on South East Asia.

Significant exceptions to the general slump in Stock Exchanges were some aircraft shares in New York and heavy industry and chemical shares in Tokyo.

Many countries reported unusually heavy selling on their Stock Exchanges. Generally this was ascribed to nervous selling by speculators rather than by genuine holders.

Prices of gold were reported sharply higher from many centres, including Hong Kong, Bangkok, Paris and Bombay. The Bombay Government declared a market emergency.

Indo-Chinese issues on the Paris Exchange led other stocks in steep drops. Amsterdam, Brussels and Swiss Exchanges also reported falls.

Some German business quarters, sharing in the slump, expressed fears that a successful Communist thrust in Korea might lead to other attacks on South East Asia.

Sterling was in keen demand in Germany but for the most part foreign exchange markets were unaffected. In Johannesburg, shares of the new South African Goldfields lost all their gains of last week.

Definite war risk insurance rates for shipments to and from Korea were withdrawn in London.

After tonight the rates will be a matter of negotiation.

Rubber in New York at one time rose by the maximum amount that is permitted for any one day. This followed sharp advances in London and Eastern markets.

Tin in London rose by about £9 a ton.—Reuter.

PEKING ON KOREA

London, June 26.

Peking Radio told China's 450,000,000 people tonight that the People's Republic of Korea (North Korea) was defending itself against an attack from South Korea.

The Radio's only reference to the fighting was a repetition of the brief announcement broadcast by the North Korean authorities.—Reuter.

"No obligation to go to war on South Korea"

Washington, June 26.

The Senate Republicans agreed today that the Korean fighting should not be considered a provocation which would force the United States into a shooting war.

Chairman Eugene Millikin of the Senate Republican Conference told reporters after a party meeting that there was unanimous opinion that the United States had no obligation to go to war over South Korea.

The conference felt that the United States had perhaps some moral commitments to help the Koreans to help themselves—to wit with military supplies. He added: "It was our unanimous opinion that the incident should not be used as a provocation for war."

The Republicans were shocked that the military establishment and the State Department were apparently caught flatfooted by the outbreak of the war. It was apparent that the State Department did not know anything more than the readers of the newspapers.

"It was just like Pearl Harbour," Republican Senator Homer Ferguson told reporters.

According to one Senator, there was "hell of a row" in the Republican conference over the Korean conflict. Republican Senator Styles Bridges was reported to have criticised the intelligence services and also the Administration for the limited volume of aid sent to Korea.

Mr. Dean Acheson, the Secretary of State, and Mr. Louis Johnson, the Secretary of Defence, faced bitter Republican criticism over the Korean situation.

Earlier, Mr. Styles Bridges, Republican Senator, was asked by reporters if he would discuss with Mr. Acheson and Mr. Johnson the developments in Korea.

"You are darn right we will," he replied, "and we are going to roll them over".

"It is about time we began asking questions about our intelligence", he added.

Up to Truman

A Senator who came out of the Committee room half an hour after the meeting today told reporters that members were going into the Korean question very thoroughly with Mr. Acheson.

To all questions about Korea, Mr. Acheson replied that recommendations had been made to President Truman, who would answer in the next few days.

Mr. Acheson said that it was up to President Truman to decide what to do about the situation in the Far East.

Mr. Truman had instructed him not to talk about possible American actions in the Far East.

The Secretary testified before the Committee on the administration's request for US$1,222,500,000 foreign military aid. His prepared testimony was made public by the State Department after he had given it. He emphasised that it was obvious that immediate passage of the overall appropriation was needed.

Gravest concern

"The situation in the Far East was never more than today a matter of the gravest concern to this Government," said Mr. Acheson.

"The bill before the Committee provides $16,000,000 for aid in the general area of China. The importance of obtaining these funds need not be underlined.

"All matters relating to U.S. aid in the Far East are now in the hands of the President for his decision so far as the executive branch is concerned. Under these circumstances, and at his direction, I shall not talk about possible courses of action in that area. It must be obvious that immediate passage of this bill, with the funds which it will provide for use in the Far East and the flexibility which it contains, is of the greatest importance...

"Our objective is peace. If we are to have peace, the free nations of the world must be strong. This programme will aid them in achievement of that strength, which will discourage aggression and promote peace."—United Press and Reuter.

ENVOY SAW IT COMING

Washington, June 26.

The American Ambassador to Korea, Mr. John J. Muccio, warned a month ago that he saw little hope for a successful defence of Southern Korea if the Northern forces attacked, it was disclosed here today.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee published a report which said that Mr. Muccio had predicted:

"The undeniable material superiority of the North Korean forces would provide North Korea with the margin of victory in the event of a full-scale invasion of the Republic.

"Such superiority is particularly evident in the matter of heavy infantry support, weapons, tanks and combat aircraft with which the USSR has supplied and continues to supply to the Korean puppet.

"It has been aggravated also by the recent Communist successes in China, which have increased considerably the military potential of the North, particularly by releasing an undetermined number of Korean troops from the Chinese Communist armies for service in Korea."

The report quoted Mr. Muccio as saying that the United States had transferred to South Korea military equipment with a replacement value of $56,000,000.—Reuter.

Drawing by FRANCIS MARSHALL

ALL FOR A PLACE IN THE SUN

By Iris Ashley

This season's suits seem to have abandoned those full, frilly bloomers and skirts which made you feel like a waterlogged lettuce when they got wet. The beaches this year are decorated by sun-worshippers wearing close-fitting suits in all kinds of new materials.

There are some lovely colours in satin nylon (this dries very quickly), there are printed cottons, and even a few of stamped nylon velvet.

The two styles Francis Marshall has sketched for you to see are in the shops now. On the left is a Jantzen suit meant for the young, slim figure.

Made of wool rayon and lastex, it has detachable shoulder straps and the brassiere is boned to hold its shape. The cords can be adjusted to make this bra high- or low-cut as you will. It comes in almost all colours.

On the right is a design by Martin White which will fit any average figure. The red and white "daisy print" cotton has a flat half-skirt in front and all the back is shirred with elastic.

The shoulder straps are also elasticised and are so attached that they can be worn on or off the shoulders, fitting snugly against the body to make the suit appear strapless.

Martin White also showed us this suit in plain coloured nylon satin, which is intended for the full figure.

While we are on the subject of swim-suits, this seems as good a moment as any to give my annual warning. The skin of the average woman is not accustomed to much exposure to sunshine.

The ideal way to get tanned, of course, is to cover yourself well with a protective lotion and then time your sun-bath, starting with 10 minutes back and front.

If you have no confidence that the sun will ever shine again, and nothing can prevent you from lying in its rays, then keep on applying sun lotion and protect your eyes with dark glasses.

These new scientific sun lotions really do offer strong protection against burning . . . . though even this must be leavened with common sense if you don't want to fry.

The summer weather and outdoor life can be very hard on dry, sensitive skins. There is a new oil on the market which is a really good antidote.

It is so quickly absorbed by the skin that it is especially attractive for women who do not like sleeping with cream on their faces.

A recovery routine

By "Yuki"

Worry and fear, combined with long, arduous duties will bring about a state of nervous exhaustion more quickly than anything else and a nerve-tired condition renders full, serene, health-giving sleep impossible; very soon, this continual state of "broken sleep" will pull down the healthiest person.

If sleep does not come readily, rise and do some mild abdominal and leg exercises—they will draw the blood from the head and give it work to do in the lower part of the body; sip a glass of hot milk and hop back into bed — the chances are you will enjoy a good, sound sleep.

The effect of the mind on health is enormous; keep your temper under control, for the mind can make or mar your whole physical wellbeing.

Complete relaxation is seldom indulged in by the nervy and highlystrung individuals. They have not learnt to apply one of nature's primary aids to health.

As you drop into bed at night, go there with the feeling that your bed is soft and warm and just waiting to receive you and support every weary part of your body. Lie on your back with head, arms and legs loose, and relaxed; breathe deeply and regularly for a minute or so, then turn over, and you'll be asleep in no time.

When "breaking-point" is reached, take a warm shower, then lie down relaxing completely.

Look at the clock, then close your eyes and see how long you can keep them closed. At first you will find it is only a few seconds, though it seems like minutes, but gradually you feel so relaxed that you can keep them closed for half an hour or more.

When you're travelling home after a hard day — close your eyes for a few moments. Then close them for longer periods. The result will surprise you as a gradual lessening of the tension all over the body takes place.

You will then be in a better state to eat your evening meal.

Food should never be taken into the stomach when you are in an exhausted condition, and where possible, at least 30 minutes should elapse between arriving home and eating.

Here are some exercises which will help you to relax completely; to bring on that physical and mental state of relaxation known as "sleep."

Relaxation exercise

Lie in bed or on the floor. Stretch your arms over your head, and then stretch the arms and body up into sitting position, keeping your legs and feet on the floor. Hold for a moment and then relax. Repeat the exercise eight times, being sure to stiffen the body each time.

Abdominal exercise

Lie on the floor with the knees flexed. Pull both knees up to your chest, grasp with both hands and pull hard. Then return slowly to your first position, and repeat (relaxing in between) about eight times.

Leg exercise

Using the end of your bed as a bar, grasp it with the right hand and from a standing position swing the left leg front, back, front; then bring it into place beside the other leg. Keep the knee rigid throughout and repeat with the other leg. To be done eight times alternately in slow time.

Mainly for mothers

By SISTER MARY MARTIN

Had Shakespeare lived today "Twelfth Night" would probably never have been written.

For Shakespeare never knew—as we know now—that boy and girl twins cannot be identical in appearance.

It is only when both children are of the same sex, both boys or both girls—not one of each—that they can be identical, or even similar.

Even then it is not always so. Twins, interestingly, occur about once in every 80 births and tend to run in families.

When twin children are brother and sister they may be complete opposites in looks and character. The only thing they do have in common is their birthday. And they don't always share that. Two instances came to my notice lately of twins with birthdays three days apart.

The same applies to twins who may be of the same sex, but who still are not really identical.

You can soon tell them, for, like brother and sister twins, the one may have fair, curly hair; the other, dark and straight. One may be quiet and retiring; the other, boisterous and up to any mischief. Their choice, too, in toys, clothes and careers may lie along two totally divergent paths.

It won't do to treat both children alike in either of these cases just because they happen to be twins. What does for one child may not do for the other.

Not so with identical twins, though. Here the resemblance is great, particularly in colour of eyes and hair, finger print patterns, height, weight and general appearance, even the blood group and blood pressure.

Identical twins generally have the same likes and dislikes. They tend to grow at the same rate, to pass together from form to form at school, to take up the same work in later life and to have similar interests.

Because they have the same susceptibilities you frequently find they tend to catch the same illnesses at the same time—provided they have both been subjected to the same infections, of course.

Perhaps the most interesting of all twins are the "mirror" twins, where one child is the exact reflection of the other.

Their hair parts naturally on opposite sides; with one twin it whorls clockwise from the crown, with the other, anti-clockwise. Their moles and freckle patterns occur on opposite cheeks.

More striking still, one twin may be right-handed, while the other may be left-handed.

Too little, too late, complaint by Koreans

San Francisco, June 26.

A spokesman for the South Korean Government said today American aid is too little and too late.

Clarence Rhee, public information officer, said President Syngman Rhee is greatly disappointed with American aid. Dr. Rhee was heard in a broadcast over Seoul Radio, which was monitored by the United Press in San Francisco.

He said: "As late as it is, it is very difficult to save anything. We have nothing to stop the North Korean gang's tanks. Although our soldiers are very brave, they sacrifice themselves to attack tanks. Korea is very hard up because aid was slow in coming. It is too little and too late."

Dr. Rhee said he did not mean to say it looked like failure for South Korea. He said: "On the Western front we are doing well. We caught guerillas operating there and now we are moving up towards Kaeson and the Communist Army there is retreating. On the Eastern front, the enemy is very near Seoul and that is considered as not so good."

General Douglas MacArthur's release of 10 fighter planes to the South Korean Government would have been a great help earlier.

But, he pointed out, the Korean pilots first must familiarise themselves with the aircraft before they could fly them in battle.

"We need them and lots more now," he added.

Envoy's appeal

In a personal appeal to President Truman, the Korean Ambassador to the United States, Mr. John Myun Chang, today asked for immediate aid against the invasion of his country by North Korean Communists.

As he left the White House the Ambassador issued a statement in which he said he thought the hour was late and the forces of the enemy may even now be in Seoul.

"I am confident that the people of the United States—indeed the people of the whole world—feel sympathy for my country and I am filled with hope that the United States will assist us in this hour of crisis," he added.

The Korean Ambassador continued, saying, "The military assistance programme for Korea has been authorised by Congress and signed by the President of the United States.

"But I am sorry to say that none of it has reached Korea to date—at the time when we need it most. This factor of time is vital.

"It is the realisation of most of the people of the United States, I feel sure, that the help which this country can give Korea at this time is help towards averting a world tragedy and that its result will mean as much to Americans and the rest of the democratic world as to Koreans.

"Thus we plead for help not only in the name of friendship but we urge this country to join us in taking a firm stand against the common enemy of all democracy."

As he left the White House after seeing President Truman and Mr. Acheson, Mr. Chang told Reuters, "I asked for more weapons with which to fight.

"We will do all the fighting but we have to have something to fight with."

South Korea was not expecting American soldiers to be sent there to aid in resistance against the North Korean invaders.

He told Reuters, "Our boys are fighting their best, they are not afraid."

Korea needed heavy weapons such as long-range guns and tanks.

They already had considerable amounts of arms and ammunition handed over when the Americans left Korea.

Attack expected

Mr. Chang said the President said the United States is doing

SOUTH EAST ASIA TAKING GOOD LOOK AT U.S. POLICY

Manila, June 26.

The Korean war put the United States Far Eastern policy under the microscope of little South East Asian states on the edge of the Communist belt.

Independent countries such as the Philippines, Indonesia and Thailand, which have good reason to fear Communist aggression, adopted a "wait and see" attitude today in respect to the fight between North and South Korea.

They said little officially but it was clear that they wanted to know whether United States help could save South Korea.

The Philippine Secretary of National Defence, Mr. Ruperto Kangleon, expressed the general feeling in these small countries when he told the United Press: "If the United States backs out, that will mean another failure in Asia."

He added that if the United States got involved, so would the Philippines.

Philippine President Quirino was known to be worried over the Korean situation although at a Press conference this evening he urged Filipinos not to become unduly alarmed.

Mr. Quirino said: "We must collect ourselves and get about with calm and await developments."

Indonesian fear

The Indonesian Government issued a statement saying that the new Republic was watching Korean developments with utmost interest and very closely, but would not take sides.

The Indonesian statement reflected fear that the Korean war might grow into a bigger conflict, and concluded that it is the concern of the cold war powers, America and Russia.

The Indonesian Government has been careful recently not to antagonise Russia, which could veto its application for United Nations membership.

In Bangkok, Thailand's Council of Ministers held an all-day meeting to discuss the Korean situation. A source close to Premier Phibun Songgram said the Thai Government was waiting to see how far the United States will go to support small nations against Red aggression.

American observers did not like the Korean affair because it looked like a difficult situation for the United States to maintain prestige in the Far East.

U.S. on spot

These observers explained that if South Korea loses, the United States, which backed the Republic of Korea every step of the way—even with arms—would suffer not only loss of face but loss of co-operation by other small nations of Asia.

Their feeling was that the United States was unable to back up its support of South Korea with the kind of military help which might be necessary to win the civil war. In that case, it would be hard to convince other countries that the United States could help them fight Communism.

Mr. Malcolm MacDonald, British Commissioner-General in South East Asia, is cutting short his trip to Indo-China to return to Singapore for consultations on the Korean situation.

Mr. MacDonald left for Saigon on June 19 for a two-week holiday visit.

In Manila, President Elpidio Quirino said that the Communist invasion of South Korea is part of a Communist imperialistic programme.

The President added that his country stood ready to support the United Nations in solving the Korean situation.

At a Press conference President Quirino said, "Fortunately we have machinery to meet such a situation in the United Nations. We must carry out the actions of that body if we are to have peace."

He had received no report that arms intended for the Philippines would be diverted to Korea.

"We are making all necessary preparations for any repercussions that might result from the situation in Korea," President Quirino said.

Burma nervous

The peace of South East Asia is dangerously jeopardised by the outbreak of war in Korea and future repercussions are likely in this area, according to official opinion in Rangoon.

A Burmese Government official regarded the Korean issue as a test case for the UN Security Council, which he felt should take a firm stand if world peace is to be safeguarded.

In Moscow, "Pravda," the sole Moscow newspaper appearing on Mondays, did not comment on the outbreak of fighting in Korea.

It printed the Pyongyang Government statements as reported by Tass, as well as Anglo-American and French news agency despatches from Seoul.

The decisions of the Security Council have not yet been reported in Moscow.

In London, meanwhile, the Soviet monitor quoted a North Korean communique and Western news agency despatches from Seoul on the fighting in Korea at 2.30 a.m. GMT, on Monday. Since then, the monitor has published 22 item, largely sports and chess news from Eastern Europe, and two attacks on Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia. There has been no further report on Korea.—United Press and Associated Press

He asked for more weapons as soon as possible because the situation in his country was getting very critical.

Reporters asked if there was any indication of Russian participation in the attack. Mr. Chang replied, "I leave it to your judgment."

He replied, "Sure," when asked if the attack was expected at this time.

He talked to State Department officials about the situation when he returned from Korea two weeks ago and "I have been telling them for a long time that it was urgent... We knew they were preparing and that an attack was imminent."

Mr. Acheson left the White House shortly after Mr. Chang but he refused to comment.

The White House Press Secretary, Charles Ross, later told reporters, "Everything the President can do has been done up to the present time," Mr. Truman was leaving shortly for his residence and planned no further meetings with officials tonight.

On Tuesday Mr. Truman would have a full calling list just like any regular day. The President allowed no regular callers today so he could concentrate on the Korean situation.—United Press.

UN order now "academic"?

Lake Success, June 26.

The United Nations Korean Commission cabled headquarters today that the Security Council's cease-fire order in Korea may become purely academic and it was impossible to estimate the situation which will exist tomorrow in Seoul.

The cable said that the North Korean advances have created a dangerous situation with possibilities of rapid deterioration.

The Commission declared that, in view of its past experience and the existing situation, it was convinced that North Korea will not heed the Security Council resolution nor will it accept the Commission's good offices.

The Commission suggested that the Security Council consider asking North and South Korea to agree on a neutral mediator either to negotiate peace or by requesting member Governments to undertake immediate mediation.

The Commission informed Mr. Trygve Lie, United Nations Secretary-General, that it had decided to stand by Seoul.

"The danger is that the critical operations now in progress may end in a matter of days and the question of a cease-fire and withdrawal of North Korean forces suggested by the Council resolution prove academic, the Commission added.—Reuter.

ECA programme for Korea on emergency basis

Washington, June 26.

The Economic Co-operation Administration late today placed its Korean aid programme on an "emergency basis" and announced a five-point plan for sending non-military supplies to the besieged peninsula.

ECA said it was taking immediate action "to back up the resistance of the South Korean people in their heroic struggle to maintain their independence."

Dr. Edgar Johnson, director of ECA's Korean programme, announced: "Primary emphasis is being placed on the setting up of machinery for prompt procurement of supplies and equipment that can be shipped to Korea from Japan or the U.S.

The decision was made after a top-level conference among ECA officials.

Mr. Johnson said that under the "immediate action" programme ECA would:

1. Switch procurement to an "emergency basis" and give priority to essential commodities, including petroleum and foodstuffs, instead of the normal peacetime exports such as raw cotton and fertiliser.

Ship diverted

2. Divert all vessels on the way to Korea with war non-essentials to a port where they would not fall into Communist hands.

3. Keep ports clear so dock workers would be free to unload armaments by diverting to other ports non-military supplies such as fertiliser.

4. Re-arrange shipping schedules for ships that are not yet on their way with ECA supplies, so all available supply vessels can be used to rush military supplies to Korea.

5. Co-ordinate ECA activities with those of the U.S. Army forces in Japan.

Dulles' report

The Republican adviser to State Secretary Mr. Dean Acheson, Mr. John Foster Dulles, will personally report to the Secretary of State on the Korean situation when he arrives in the United States. Meanwhile, General Douglas MacArthur has stepped up his aid to the tiny invaded Republic.

Informed sources in Tokyo said today that Mr. Dulles will report that quick American action in getting aid flowing to Seoul would impress Asiatic nations which had been watching to see if they could count on American assistance in time of crisis involving Communist forces.

Mr. Dulles will also report that General MacArthur got supplies moving almost within 24 hours after the North Koreans launched their attack.

However, one source said Mr. Dulles will endeavour to impress Mr. Acheson and others that aid must continue in sufficient quantity to be effective in halting and driving back the armies of the Russian-supported North Korean regime.

An undisclosed number of personnel from General MacArthur's headquarters left for Korea today.

Japs scared

The Communist drive in Korea frightened the Japanese who have been cold on the idea of America keeping bases here after the treaty and one newspaper suggested in an editorial that the Japanese should voluntarily offer strategic parts of her territory to the United States.

The "Jiji Shimpo" declared that a totally unarmed Japan after the peace treaty will be a temptation to Communist forces and would be more easily taken than South Korea. It said: "Since Japan has dangerous neighbours it is clear that the United States alone can guarantee our security."—United Press.

MINIMUM WAGE ON THE LAND

Geneva, June 26.

The next general session of the International Labour Organisation is to discuss the creation of machinery for fixing a minimum wage in agriculture, the present 33rd conference of the ILO decided here today.

This subject, put on the agenda on the recommendation of the Agricultural Committee, will be discussed with a view to an eventual decision on a world convention for minimum wages on the land.

A United States amendment to replace the word "convention" by "recommendation", was defeated by 75 votes to 29.

Mr. Montague Jayawickreme, Ceylon Government representative and Chairman of the ILO Agriculture Committee, made the report to today's plenary session. —Reuter.

Burma not taking sides in Indo-China

Rangoon, June 26.

Burma is unlikely to attend any conference to debate recognition of the Associate States of Indo-China—Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia—because her policy forbids interference in the affairs of other States, it was authoritatively declared today.

A source very close to the Foreign Office told The Associated Press that Burma will withhold recognition in Indo-China until the Indo-Chinese issue has been settled by the Indo-Chinese themselves.

He added that in any case Burma cannot now side with Bao Dai against Ho Chi-minh, having already recognised Communist China.—Associated Press.

LETTER TO SCAP PLAYED UP

Moscow, June 27.

The Soviet Press gave prominent play today to a letter from Lieutenant-General Kuzma Derevyanko to General Douglas MacArthur in which the head of the Soviet military mission in Tokyo alleged that the Potsdam Treaty was violated by U. S. action against the Japanese Communist Party.

In an accompanying editorial, Pravda said that Japanese resistance to the American Occupation is growing stronger.—Associated Press.

GOVERNMENT WILL NOT BUDGE ON STEEL PLAN

London, June 26.

The Labour Government, defending itself against a combined Conservative-Liberal onslaught in Parliament today on its handling of the Schuman coal-steel merger proposals, refused to budge from the decision which keeps it out of the current Paris talks.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir Stafford Cripps, gave this view when speaking in a crucial two-day debate.

The debate was opened by the former Conservative Foreign Secretary, Mr. Anthony Eden, now deputy leader of the Conservatives, who urged the Government to reconsider their attitude and join in the current six-power Paris talks on the Schuman Plan.

But Sir Stafford Cripps answered that Britain must await the results of the Paris meeting before she could take any initiative.

He also said: "In our view participation in a political federation limited to Western Europe was not compatible either with our Commonwealth ties, our obligations as a member of the wider Atlantic community or as a world power."

In opening his attack on the Government, Mr. Eden said he believed that if Britain did not try to make the Schuman Plan succeed it would almost certainly set a return to the narrowest form of nationalism and would have far-reaching repercussions on Western defence against Communism.

He claimed that if the suggestion had come from a Socialist bloc of States the British Government would have strained every nerve to go in and try influence the situation from the inside.

"The French initiative was fundamentally a movement for peace in a world where the threat to peace is immediate and deadly."

Labour amendment

The debate will be continued tomorrow when the Conservative leader, Mr. Winston Churchill, is expected to wind up for the Opposition and the Prime Minister, Mr. Clement Attlee, will wind up for the Government.

The Government, by its decision, was countering with an amendment welcoming the French Foreign Minister, Mr. Robert Schuman's initiative but indicating that Britain could not take part in talks committed in advance to accept a supra-national "High Authority."

The Government, however, asked Parliament to approve its readiness to take part in the talks expressing the hope that it might be able to associate itself with the common effort.

If the Government is defeated tomorrow it would mean a general election, but the odds tonight appeared on a narrow victory for Mr. Attlee's slender majority Ministry.

Mr. Eden attacked the Government's attitude to the talks in a packed House of Commons, tense and sombre with the news from war-torn Korea.

A breakdown of the Schuman talks, Mr. Eden asserted, would see a return to the narrowest form of European nationalism.

He thought it absolutely right to say that if Britain did not try to make the Schuman Plan a success it would almost certainly fail and be replaced by a Franco-German cartel which would be a danger British interests.—Reuter.

WINE TARIFF

Canberra, June 27.

Australia's wine interests intend to renew their request to the British Government for a modification of the new tariff on Empire wines as soon as an opportunity offers, a spokesman for the Australian Wine Board said.

Britain, the largest buyer of Australian wines, received in 1948 more than 2,000,000 gallons, but in 1949 following the raising of the tariff this figure fell by 65 per cent.—Reuter.

MOSCOW TALKS PEACE PURELY AS MEANS OF WAGING WAR

San Francisco, June 26.

Moscow was talking peace as a means of waging war, the United States Atomic Energy Commissioner, Mr. Gordon Dean, said today.

Mr. Dean told the American Medical Association that people who had signed the Stockholm peace petition were pawns of the Russians.

The Stockholm resolution completely ignored the wide insistence on really workable international control.

"Moscow can well afford to press such a campaign because it can do no harm, and in fact does some good to its military position," he said.

"The resolution does not call for the destruction of existing bombs. It does not prohibit their continued use.

"And most significant of all, it completely ignores the 46-nation insistence upon a really workable, enforceable international control of atomic energy.

"That the USSR does not want. Its delegates refuse to discuss truly effective control."

Mr. Dean said that it was important to realise that the Stockholm resolution did not brand as a war criminal the nation which first committed an act of aggression.

Retaliator the war criminal

"Ten million Russians equipped with tanks, artillery, bombs and bombers might be overrunning the world, but if one of the Western Powers should attempt to break the invasion and retaliate with the atomic bomb the nation so retaliating, and not the original aggressor, becomes the war criminal," he said.

Discussing Russian assertions that its atomic energy programme was devoted to peaceful uses, Mr. Dean said, "If a country is really devoting its atomic energy effort to such peacetime projects one would think, since no security problems are involved, that the world might be told just which river has changed its course and just which mountain has been moved."

Between five and 10 per cent of the United States atomic energy programme could be labelled as purely peacetime effort, he said.

Slightly more could be designated as purely weapons, and about 70 per cent could yield weapons for war or power for peacetime uses.

Mr. Dean added, "The world must know that our great stocks of fissionable material, now fabricated into weapons, can be readily turned to peacetime uses when we know, not by false words, but by affirmative action, that peace is really wanted."—Reuter.

Shipping schedules upset

Washington, June 26.

The Korean situation has upset the schedules of at least 15 American vessels in the East China Sea—Sea of Japan area, a spokesman for the National Federation of American Shipping said today.

Mr. John Rudy, Public Relations Director, told a reporter that ship owners are undecided as to whether to allow shipping to proceed into or out of the area.

The 10,000-ton Letina Lykes, bound from Kobe for Pusan, Southern Korea, with 5,000 tons of cargo, has been diverted to Moji in Southern Japan.

A sister ship, Jesse Lykes, is continuing to discharge cargo at Pusan on information from the State Department that there are no immediate plans for evacuation of the Pusan area.

Owners are concerned over the prospective lack of war risk insurance in the event of hostilities on a larger scale.—Associated Press.

CANADA WILL BACK THE UN

Ottawa, June 26.

The External Affairs Minister, Lester Pearson, said today that Canada would give full support to the United Nations in any action to end the Korean war.

Mr. Pearson told the House of Commons that the attack on the South Korean Republic was unprovoked aggression and a breach of peace. He hoped some action might be possible through the United Nations to end the fighting. He was sure the Government would have the support of Parliament if Canada's full support were lent to the Security Council.

The Opposition leader, George Drew, called on the Government immediately to look to its defences.

"The only way we are going to prevent in Canada what is happening in Korea is for this and other North Atlantic Pact nations to show the aggressors in the Kremlin that any aggression will be dealt with by armed force," he said.—United Press.

ROMULO WARNING

San Francisco, June 26.

The Philippine Foreign Minister, Carlos Romulo, called on the world powers tonight to do all their fighting in the United Nations. He warned that their rearmament race can only lead to atomic war which will mean the ruin of all hopes for a better world.

The Filipino Minister, who is also President of the UN General Assembly, spoke at San Francisco on the occasion of the fifth anniversary of the signing of the United Nations Charter.—United Press.

BERLIN HINT ON MOSCOW'S PLANS

Berlin, June 26.

Sources close to the East German Communist Government said tonight that Moscow does not desire to provoke a third world war in Korea and that North Korean Communist forces would retreat to their pre-battle status quo, the 38th parallel, if such a threat developed.

These sources claimed this was the Kremlin's attitude, handed to the East German Government and the East European Soviet satellite countries regarding the Korean war.—Associated Press.

NORTH KOREAN CABINET MEETS

San Francisco, June 26.

The North Korean Council of Ministers held an emergency meeting "to discuss the various aspects of the serious incidents arising from the attack" on North Korean territory by the "South Korean puppet government," the Peking radio reported.

The broadcast said an important decision was made at the meeting, but failed to give further details.

The radio also broadcast a Tass despatch from Phyongyang, Capital of North Korea, dated June 23, claiming that the South Korean Government "evicts thousands of peasants from their homes and burns down entire villages and other rural communities, dooming the population to poverty and starvation." It quoted the Tass despatch as saying: "Three million homeless people are now roaming South Korea."—United Press.

Nationalist soldiers turn bandit

Rangoon, June 26.

Hostile Chinese have again attacked villages along the Sino-Burmese border neighbouring the Eastern Shan State of Kengtung.

The Chinese are believed to be the remnants of the 93rd Division of the Nationalist Army which fled from Yunnan before the Communists entered the Province.

The reports said the Chinese in some instances crossed the border but were driven back by Burmese troops.

According to reports the Burmese Government has at present interned 1,500 Nationalist soldiers in accordance with international law.—Associated Press.

CHEMICAL MAKERS' CLAIM

Kalamazoo, Michigan, June 26.

The Upjohn Company, pharmaceutical manufacturers, says it is the first to put an atom-smasher to purely industrial use.

A 2,000-volt electron accelerator, a sort of baby brother of the gigantic cyclotrons which meant so much in atomic research, has been installed in the Physics Department of the Upjohn Company's plant here. It will be used in developing a revolutionary method of sterilising drugs and medicine manufactured by the company.

The 3,000 pounds of complicated machinery which forms the atom smasher includes a six-foot, 1,500-pound bell of half-inch stainless steel and a switchboard full of gadgets a half floor below the bell.

From the bell the machine shoots a stream of electrons (electrically charged particles) through a vacuum tube, aimed at whatever target the operator desires.

Physicists working at Upjohn said the electrons reach a speed of approximately 1,750,000 miles a second when they leave the "muzzle" at the bottom. That is a rate of seven times around the world every second.

The Upjohn Company plans to shoot the speeding electrons into drugs already packaged for commercial sale. Just like bullets from a gun, the electrons will drill through the package and its contents, killing any bacteria.

Under present methods, the products are sterilised either by heat, filtration or the addition of chemicals.—Associated Press.

Male magnetism vanishing art

New York, June 27.

The men, whose the ladies are concerned, are definitely slipping.

They're losing their "MM"—Male Magnetism. And that's bad. It's even worse than losing the old SA—Sex Appeal. It applies to more men.

At least, that's the contention of red-haired Lisa Lengyel, director of the Institute For the Study and Development of Male Magnetism.

"The magnetic male is becoming almost as extinct as the Neanderthal Man," Miss Lengyel said. "If the men don't do something about it, women will lose all interest in them."

She said MM is the "outward projection of the latent qualities that are best in man." Sex appeal, she added, is merely animal magnetism "which any good looking, vital man can have."

Women different

"Man is attracted to woman mostly by sight," she explained. "Not so with woman. She is attracted to man through all her senses, as well as her emotions and imagination.

"If a man captures a woman's mind and fires her imagination, the rest is easy. However, most men nowadays have no idea of how to achieve it.

"For instance, to give a woman a general compliment means nothing. A man must study a woman and pick out the little things to compliment her on—the way she walks, the way her eyes crinkle when she laughs, and so on."

To be successful with the ladies, she said, the man must be neatly groomed, well mannered, "have a little bit of the ham in him" and also attain a generous blending of idealism.

Needs to know how

"He must win their confidence, play on their romantic impulses and know how to compliment them," she continued. "The magnetic male has a generous assortment of vices and virtues, but he knows how to handle his vices well. He can be wicked, but delightfully so. He is usually self-sacrificing and generous of spirit and he knows how to tip."

The frequent use of profanity, drunkenness and attempts to make love in public seriously detract from a man's attractiveness, she observed.

FOREIGN POLICY STUDY PLAN

Adelaide, June 26.

The Australian Prime Minister, Mr. Robert G. Menzies, suggested today that a committee to study Imperial foreign policy be set up in London, to be attended by the Foreign Secretary of the United Kingdom and the Commonwealth High Commissioners.

It should sit regularly and its work should be regarded as of equal importance to that of the Cabinet.

Mr. Menzies also proposed the setting up of a Commonwealth Economic Secretariat, in order to coordinate the economic policies of the United Kingdom and the Commonwealth countries.—Reuter.

U.S. EXPERTS FOR PERSIA

Washington, June 26.

The United States will send three economic experts to Persia, probably late this week, to study conditions there. They will determine what steps the United States might take to strengthen Persia as a strategic Middle Eastern nation.

They will work with Mr. Henry F. Grady, the United States Ambassador - designate whose nomination is expected to be approved in a few days. Mr. Grady will go to the Persian capital in about two weeks.—Reuter.

JAP AGENCIES IN HOLLAND

The Hague, June 26.

The Dutch Government is considering the establishment of Japanese overseas agencies in the Netherlands.

Agencies to promote mutual trade between Japan and other countries have already been set up in the U.S. and several West European countries.—Associated Press.

TIN STRENGTH

New York, June 26.

Grade A spot tin sold for 77 cents a pound today—an advance of 5/8 of a cent from the final price on Friday. Some traders of spot tin were reported to be asking 77-1/2 cents a pound. The market strength was attributed to the fighting in Korea.—Associated Press.

Jitters on London Stock Exchange

London, June 26.

The London Stock Exchange—Europe's financial nerve centre—suffered a severe attack of jitters today with news of the outbreak of warfare in Korea. Minus signs appeared before nearly every item in the exchange list of commodities. The Financial Times' index was 113.2, down one point, the biggest drop in recent months.

The threat which the Korean fighting poses to neighbouring Japan was mirrored in the sale of Japanese bonds, which slumped heavily. The 1907 issue lost seven points. The 1930s dropped six and 1910s fell 5-1/2. British Government bonds also were off.

Losses in rubber were as much as two shillings, but there was no rush to sell.—Associated Press.

SLUMP IN NEW YORK STOCKS

New York, June 26.

The stock market today took one of its worst falls in 20 years. It was the market's first appraisal of the possibility that war in Korea might spread over the world.

Closing prices were down US$1 to US$7 a share. Trading volume for the first time in 10 years approached 4,000,000 shares.

Late in the day selling appeared to have played out, but a few minutes before the final bell sounded another selling flood swamped the market.

The market value of all stocks listed on the exchange dropped roughly four billion dollars.

At the opening of the New York stock exchange, blocks of stock running to 35,000 shares were thrown on the market. Opening transactions were delayed as much as two hours while buyers and sellers got together on prices.

Key issues broke US$1 to US$5 a share at the opening.

For a while prices steadied. A little afternoon selling forces lashed out with another savage attack and prices tumbled an extreme of around US$9 a share. Selling orders came from all quarters.

W. INDIES CRICKETERS IN STRONG POSITION

London, June 27.

The West Indies, in their second innings at Lords today, lost four wickets for 147 runs at lunch.

The shocks to England yesterday following so closely on the victory at Manchester have made the current Test against the West Indies one of the most gripping since the war.

West Indies entered on the third day in an overwhelmingly strong position, all wickets intact, a lead of 220 runs and three days to play.

They could therefore carry on at their own pace, consolidating the position while Goddard had the advantage of being able to declare when he wished should the pitch show signs of becoming difficult.

With no rain during the night the pitch still looked in perfect condition for batting when Rae and Stollmeyer continued the West Indies second innings.

Neither batsman seemed in the mood to launch out into attack and 20 minutes produced only three runs. Then Jenkins produced one of his "specials," a flighted leg-break which deceived Stollmeyer, who was stretched forward as his wicket tumbled.

Bedser at the other end did not concede a run until his fourth over when Worrell drove him for four. Worrell, in contrast to the openers was bent on attack. He hooked one from Jenkins into the crowd for a glorious six but Bedser continued to peg away and six of his first seven overs were maidens.

Then Jenkins struck again this time at Rae. A ball with all the appearance of a top spinner, which came off the pitch at an unexpected speed, broke his wicket and the opening batsmen were back in the pavilion with 75 runs on the board.

England now needed to break the Weekes-Worrell partnership if they were to keep alive any faint hopes of saving the match. Worrell clouted two full tosses from Jenkins to the boundary but at 45, he enjoyed an escape.

Misjudged flight

Wardle, probably misjudging the flight of the ball against the dark background of the stands, started late for a possible catch and the ball fell at his feet. Off the next ball, Worrell stretched forward but did not notice the turn of a leg-break and was caught in the slips. This was another victim for Jenkins, who had then taken three for 46 runs this morning in 15 overs, three of which were maidens.

Goddard promoted himself in the batting list and came out to join Weekes, probably thinking his left handed play would better combat the spin of Jenkins.

Goddard concentrated on defence against the well-placed field while Weekes tried to hustle along the score. Bedser took over from Berry but the new ball was still not called for.

Jenkins continued at the opposite end where he had not been given a rest throughout the morning and his light-hearted work was further rewarded at 140 when Goddard, trying to steer a ball through the slips edged into the safe hands of Evans.

Only one run was added before lunch was taken at 147 for four, with West Indies 322 runs ahead.

Monday's play

London, June 26.

Sonny Ramadhin, 20-year-old clerk, and Alfred Valentine, hero of the Manchester Test who was born three days earlier, played havoc with England's batsmen on the second day of the second Test at Lords here today and gave the West Indies a wonderful chance of recording their first Test victory in this country.

They were chiefly responsible for England being dismissed for 151 runs, which left them 175 runs behind the West Indies' total of 326.

John Goddard did not enforce the follow-on and the West Indies opening batsmen, Rae and Stollmeyer, put on 45 runs without loss before stumps were drawn, leaving the visitors 220 runs ahead.

Seldom has better bowling been seen at Lords. Ramadhin in particular baffled the batsmen and this lithe little cricketer, the first East Indian to represent the West Indies, richly deserved his five wickets for 66 runs.

The bowling figures of the two West Indians showed how they dominated the play for Valentine bowled 28 maidens in 45 overs, taking four wickets for 48 runs, and Ramadhin sent down 43 overs, of which 27 were maidens.

At the same time the England batting was very uninspiring.

Opening stand broken

Once the opening stand had been broken at 62, there was no partnership exceeding 16 runs until Berry joined Wardle for the last wicket. Then Wardle showed that the bowling could be hit by rattling up 33 runs quickly.

Doggart brought speed bowling on with the new ball to check matters and Berry was caught, leaving Wardle 33 not out as the third highest scorer to Washbrook's 36 runs and Hutton's 35.

By the tea interval the West Indies were right on top for they had claimed eight wickets for 117 runs. Grand bowling by Valentine and Ramadhin was responsible for there was apparently nothing wrong with the pitch.

After the first wicket stand of 62 runs, the best of the afternoon was 16 for the sixth wicket and there was a danger of England following on when tea was taken at 117 runs for the loss of eight wickets.

Although four wickets fell before lunch and two more very soon afterwards, the pitch was in no way responsible. It remained easy paced and gave no assistance to the spin-type bowling of Valentine and Ramadhin.

Ramadhin bowled 10 successive maidens, mostly to Washbrook, before the Lancastrian turned him to leg for a single.

Edrich cautious

Edrich was so cautious that he scored only one run in half an hour.

Washbrook took a four off Ramadhin but in the same over reached forward to Ramadhin and was smartly stumped.

Ramadhin's length was tantalising and batsmen did not find him easy to play.

Without an addition to the score—74 runs—he struck again getting Doggart leg-before.

By this time the West Indies were right on top and the collapse of England's batting continued. Even allowing for the pitch not being quite so good as on the first day and the fact that the bowling was first-class, there was much that was woeful about the batting.

Edrich could not fathom Ramadhin, though he did accept a full toss to get a boundary. This was only his third scoring stroke in 70 minutes. Edrich had an escape when he went down the pitch to drive Ramadhin but missed only to watch Walcott fail with a stumping chance.

It was not long before he was caught by the wicketkeeper, however, after batting 85 minutes for eight runs.

Evans, in a perky fashion, joined his captain and this pair looked like emulating the Manchester recovery. They passed the 100 but at 102 runs Ramadhin hit Evans' stumps and England were now in grave danger of following on.

Two more victims

The West Indies continued to dominate the game for Valentine claimed two more victims before tea arrived with England 117 runs for eight wickets.

After tea Ramadhin claimed his fifth victim by clean bowling Bedser, but then ensued a bright last wicket stand between Wardle and Berry. Wardle took most of the bowling and hit freely to help the total to 150 runs, but at 151 runs, with Jones introduced to the attack, Berry was caught by Goddard and the innings closed.

Although England were 175 runs behind the follow-on was not enforced.

There remained 75 minutes of the day's play when the West Indies' opening pair, Rae and Stollmeyer, went out to start the second innings.

With the score at 15 Rae put an easy catch up to fine leg but Wardle blundered and missed the chance after which the batsmen went steadily along with Stollmeyer the more enterprising.

The scoring was not fast, however, only 33 runs coming in three-quarters of an hour.

Rae and Stollmeyer continued doggedly and remained together until stumps were drawn having then put on 45 runs between them with no extras.—Reuter.

TEA-TIME SCORE

London, June 27.

By tea-time today the West Indies, in their second Test innings here, had scored 270 runs for five wickets.—Reuter.

WIMBLEDON TENNIS:

Frank Sedgman may not be able to complete the tournament

Wimbledon, June 26.

The tragedy of this year's Wimbledon Lawn Tennis Championships, the most open for many years, may be the inability of the young Australian, Frank Sedgman, who is seeded No. 1, to complete the tournament in which he is the favourite to win the men's singles.

With a sprained right wrist heavily bandaged, he fought his way to a painful and labourious 6-4, 7-5 and 6-4 win over Howard Walton, the guileful British International.

But after the match he admitted that the wrist, injured in the French Championships, was giving him trouble, and added: "I do not know whether it will see me through."

Against the resourceful Walton, who played clever tennis, Sedgman was occasionally reduced to pathetic ineptitude.

His superior speed and volleying, however, pulled him through at critical periods, particularly when he trailed 1-3 in the second set.

Two other seeded players won under handicap. Jaroslav Drobny, the self-exiled Czech now representing Egypt, had an injured shoulder well tested by the Frenchman, Christian Grandet, but his powerful kicking service lost none of its effectiveness and he won 6-4, 6-3 and 6-1.

Dilip Bose, India's No. 1, playing against doctor's advice following a bout of malaria, struggled through to beat Frank Mott-Trille, the Oxford University tennis captain, by 6-3, 11-9 and 6-1.

He is determined to justify his seeding and has no intention of withdrawing.

Initial hurdles

Most of the other seeded players overcame their initial hurdles with ease, but one or two found the going hard. Victor Seixas, 10th ranked American, met a courageous opponent in 21-year-old Sven Davidsson. He won 6-4, 3-6, 6-1 and 6-3, but not before having some anxious moments, particularly during a slow start when he made many mistakes.

Gardnar Mulloy, another American, dropped the first set to Joseph Palada, the left-handed Yugoslav player, who arrived just before the Championship started after a 64-hours' journey.

But there was no question of Mulloy's superiority afterwards and he won 3-6, 6-1, 6-1 and 6-1.

Other fancied players who entered the second round were the Australians John Bromwich and Geoff Brown, both previous finalists, the Americans Billy Talbert, seeded No. 2, Budge Patty, Irvin Dorfman, and the South African, Eric Sturgess, who had an easy win over John Horn, the British Junior Champion.

Opposition from the second Test cricket match at Lords may have affected the early attendance which, though large with a big proportion of women in gay summer frocks, was not exceptional.

In the absence of the American, Ted Schroeder, last year's Champion, the honour of opening the Championships went to the runner-up, Drobny.

He played Grandet to start a first day's programme which was confined to 64 first-round matches in the men's singles.

Narendra Nath, India's No. 3, entered the second round by beating Jacques Sanglier, an unranked French player, by 6-4, 6-1 and 6-0.

Never extended

Nath was never extended by the red-haired Frenchman, who before the war was one of France's promising younger players. Nath had just that extra turn of speed, a capacity for mixing shots adroitly and, above all, greater mobility to outclass his opponent.

Sanglier reacted strongly only once, when Nath had set point at 5-1 in the first set. With a neat drop shot the Frenchman saved the point and again going on to take two more before Nath clinched the set.

It was largely a baseline contest, Nath taking good care to give Sanglier little chance of going to the net. Sanglier was evidently puzzled at times at the effects of a seemingly innocuous stroke. "It is unbelievable," he muttered.

Naresh Kumar, the 21-year-old Calcutta player, had a vigorous game before beating 46-year-old George Godsell by 6-2, 3-6, 6-3 and 6-2 in the first round of the men's singles.

Kumar was given plenty of opportunity to practice his overhead strokes by the retired schoolmaster and Gloucester County player.

Fluent ground strokes

The Indian player took the first set easily enough but Goodsell found a length in the second and, with a series of fluent ground strokes, took it 6-3.

The Englishman continued to find the corners with great accuracy in the third set, testing Kumar's footwork to the full. Some astonishing retrieving powers were witnessed especially in the seventh game, which proved the turning point.

Kumar made excellent use of the half volley, and made no mistake about the fourth set for the match.

The giant Indian Davis Cup player, Sumant Misra, made short work of the British County player, G. D. Meredith, and ran out an easy winner by 6-3, 6-2 and 6-1 in the first round of the men's singles.

Misra won the first four games in a row and his speed completely baffled Meredith. The Indian was never extended and coasted through the match, from which he took the opportunity to gain valuable match practice.

He demonstrated with power and decision his formidable service and backhand.

Ip Koon-hung hits the spotlight

London, June 26.

Hong Kong's tennis star, Ip Koon-hung, hit the spotlight again today by extending the seasoned H. Weiss, of Argentina, to four sets before losing his first round Wimbledon tennis encounter here.

A newcomer to Wimbledon courts, Ip played a sound game to wrest the first set from Weiss with a score of 8-6.

Scoring in the three other sets was close, Weiss winning them by 6-3, 6-3 and 6-4.

Ip holds Hong Kong's singles title.

On June 15 he lost to Jaroslav Drobny, the self-exiled Czech now playing for Egypt, by 5-7 and 2-6 in the West of England Lawn Tennis Championships at Bristol.

His first set score of 5-7 was particularly striking, considering Drobny's experience and international standing.

A game struggle

In his play against Weiss today, Ip put up a game struggle before being eliminated. Weiss won by 6-8, 6-3, 6-3 and 6-4.

Ip's tricky combination of spin and short driving across the court had Weiss in trouble early on.

The Argentinian was forced into errors and he was out-positioned, but he steadied midway through the second set, pinned the Hong Kong star to the back of the court and came up to the net on every occasion.

Tightening up his game, Weiss slowly forged ahead but he was never completely at ease against a player who seemed to have an inexhaustible variety of shots.—Reuter.

County cricket:

Warwick troubled by bowling of Doug Wright

London, June 26.

The County Championship leaders, Warwickshire, found themselves in trouble against the bowling of Doug Wright, the Kent and England leg-break bowler, who was discarded for the present Test, at Birmingham today on the second day of the current County cricket programme.

Arthur Fagg completed a grand innings of 146 runs to put Kent on the way to their comfortable total of 362 and accurate bowling, especially by Wright, who took five wickets, accounted for eight Warwickshire wickets for 211 runs.

Fagg took nearly five hours over his innings, which included 15 fours.

A courageous effort by Laurie Fishlock, who stayed three and a half hours for 64 runs out of 138, put Surrey on the road to recovery against Hampshire at Guildford.

Resuming with four wickets down for 56 runs, they totalled 227 runs in five hours and established a lead of 52. Hampshire were 83 runs in front with five wickets standing at the close.

Lively attack

Constable helped to add 60 for Surrey's fifth partnership in 95 minutes, but Fishlock alone showed much ability to cope with the lively attack.

Surrey lost half their wickets for 103 runs and their ninth pair were together before they gained first innings points.

Ebbw Vale had been looking forward to its only first-class match of the season but rain has practically ruined the fixture between Glamorgan and Northants.

Only two and a quarter hours' play was possible today. In that time Watkins managed to complete his century innings which included two sixes and 13 fours obtained in just over four hours for 105 runs.

The innings of the day came from J. K. Graveney, the elder brother of the batsman, Tom, of Gloucestershire.

In 50 minutes of powerful and stylish stroke play, with the off-drive beautifully aimed, this left-hander hit six fours and two sixes for 51 runs.

Close of play scores

The following are the close of play scores of first-class cricket matches played today.

At Guildford: Hampshire 175 and 135 for five (Rogers 67); Surrey 227.

At Perth: Scotland 58 and 315 (Henderson 83, Edward 90, Boucher five for 130). Ireland 118 and 23 for no wicket.

At Buxton: Derbyshire 115 (Elliot 51, Tattersall, right-arm medium offspin bowler, six for 46). Lancashire 170 for one (Ikin 103 not out, Place 52). Rain stopped play for the day.

At Bath: Leicestershire 210 (Palmer 82, Jackson 61) Somerset 199 and 140 for four. Rain stopped play for the day.

At Colchester: Essex 253 and 122 for three. Gloucestershire 202.

At Ebbw Vale: Glamorgan 263. Northamptonshire—five for no wicket.

At Birmingham: Kent 362. Warwickshire 211 for eight.

At Leeds: Notts 349. Yorkshire 187 for two (Lowson 82, Hilliday 76).

At Chichester: Sussex 384. Oxford University 206 and 242 for one (Boobbyer 126, Hofmeyr 102 not out).

At Worcester: Cambridge University 270 and 37 for no wicket. Worcester 49 for one.—Reuter.

LAWN BOWLS

An upset was caused by R. M. V. Ribeiro and L. S. da Silva in the first round of the Colony Open Lawn Bowls Pairs Championship at Kowloon Cricket Club yesterday when they beat M. I. Razack and A. M. Omar by 23-17.

The winners deserved their win for they played good bowls. The winners were leading 7-5 and by the end of the seventh head, Omar and Razack took the lead by scoring a single and four to lead 9-7.

Thereafter Silva and Ribeiro took the lead and kept up till the end in spite of the strong challenge put up by Omar.

OPEN TRIPLES

At the Police Recreation Club A. M. Kadir, S. Yusuf and M. Y. Adal entered the quarter finals of the Colony Open Lawn Bowls Triples Championship when they beat J. Kinniburgh, A. Mullen and J. C. Chalmers in an exciting finish by two shots, the final score being 16-14.

Indian tennis is set to do great things

Wimbledon, June 26.

Narendra Nath, India's No. 3 lawn tennis player, said here today that in his opinion the Indian players at Wimbledon this year were "only a notch below the best in the world."

"That notch is represented by the ability which comes with the experience of being able to pull out that extra something at the critical point in a game," he declared.

"I believe Indian tennis is set to do great things in the next few years," he continued. "The more of us who can get to play against the leading Americans and Australians the sooner we shall be winning national championships."—Reuter.

Wimbledon's Most Amazing Upset In Years

SEVENTEEN-YEAR-OLD ELIMINATES THE DEFENDING CHAMPION

Wimbledon, England, June 27.

Seventeen-year-old Hamilton Richardson of Baton Rouge, Louisiana, blasted defending champion Budge Patty out of the All-England Tennis Championship today in the most spine-tingling Wimbledon upset in years.

Veteran Wimbledon officials said they believed this was the earliest defeat for a Singles Champion in the history of the tournament. Before 1909, the defending champion had to play only one match — the challenge round, similar to the Davis Cup — against the survivor of the regular tournament.

The diabetic youngster, who has never been a ranking American player, shook off a leg cramp in the deciding set and went on to win 4-6, 6-3, 4-6, 10-8, 6-4.

Richardson, red-haired, freckle-faced six-footer with a sizzling service and an unbeatable backhand, said afterwards: "Sure, I thought I could win." And then he added with a grin: "But I didn't really think I would."

Richardson is the youngest American ever to play at Wimbledon. On his play today, he is one of the best of any age.

Patty, always fighting to play even in the last two sets, ended his championship reign flat on his back. He fell in a vain effort to reach Richardson's match-winning shot—a perfect backhand drive down the left sideline of the court.—Associated Press.

LIKE A VETERAN

Richardson, despite his youth, played like a veteran in the later stages; his courage and stamina, coupled with some brilliant baseline play enabling him to force the hard volleying Patty into errors and exhaustion.

Patty was well below the form which won him the title last year though this does not detract from the magnificent performance of a rising young star.

Games went with service in the crucial fourth set until Richardson broke through Patty's delivery, taking set with a lovely backhand placement. Patty was now near exhaustion, though he fought bitterly as games again went with service.

The youngster lost two sets and match points before winning with a cross shot which had Patty hopelessly beaten.

Patty and Richardson are playing together in the men's doubles.

TOUGH CUSTOMERS

Richardson next meets Vladimir Petrovic, Yugoslavia's No. 4. He is in the same quarter of the draw as the South African Eric Sturgess and in the same half as Jaroslav Drobny, the former Czech, and Lennart Bergelin (Sweden) and Ken McGregor (Australia) the other seeds.

After the match Richardson was as cool as a cucumber and showed little sign of his tremendous exertions. He said, "I thought I had a chance when I went on the court".

His mother, Mrs Cary Richardson, was a proud woman as she watched her eldest son provide the crowd, which engulfed all entrances to the No. 1 Court, with a display which will rank with Wimbledon's greatest.

Richardson, a diabetic, has a daily insulin injection before breakfast. During the match he ate 10 lumps of sugar to help him to victory.

Even so he did not get through the five sets without trouble.

"Cramp caught me in the left leg in the third game of the fifth set and I thought, 'Here it goes'," he said.—Reuter.

HARD GOING FOR OTHERS

Patty was the only seeded player to be beaten in either the men's or women's singles. But he was not the only one in serious trouble.

Tenth-seeded Lennart Bergelin of Sweden lost the first two sets before defeating Felicissimo Ampon, the Mighty Mite from the Philippines, 2-6, 2-6 6-2 9-7, 6-3.

Australia's Frank Sedgmann had to go all out to knock over Sven Davidsson of Sweden, 6-4, 7-9, 6-4, 6-2.

Eighth-seeded Sturgess twice came within a point of losing to Candy of Australia but pulled it out 6-3, 4-6, 8-6, 6-2.

Second-seeded Jaroslav Drobny needed all of his long tournament experience to oust 20-year-old Torben Ulrich of Denmark 11-9, 1-6, 6-3, 6-4.

EASIER FOR AMERICANS

Americans had things much easier. Dick Savitt of Orange, N.J., seeded sixth, lost only three games in whipping E. J. David of Britain, 6-1, 6-1, 6-1.

Third-seeded Art Larsen of San Fernando, Cal., beat Geoff Paish of Britain, 6-3, 6-1, 12-10 after some third-set clowning.

Herb Flam, seeded fourth, beat C. Spychala, self-exiled Pole, 6-0, 6-1, 6-3, and Gardner Mulloy of Miami, seeded ninth, had no trouble in beating John Horn, former British boy champion, 6-4, 6-0, 6-4.

Ken McGregor of Australia, seeded seventh, won three close sets from Canada's Main, 6-3, 7-5, 7-5.

The two unseeded American men still around did all right for themselves, too.

Gene Garrett, former University of California (Los Angeles) doubles star, ousted the Yugoslav champion, Josip Pallada, in straight sets, 6-3, 6-3, 6-2.

Straight Clark of Pasadena, Cal., defeated Sverre Lie of Norway, 6-4, 6-4, 7-5.

The Americans took a jolt in the men's doubles, however, where Flam and Larsen, seeded third here and ranked third in the United States, were beaten in the first round by the Swedish Davis Cup pair, Bergelin and Davidsson, 2-6, 7-5, 6-3, 6-4.—Associated Press.

DROBNY AT HIS BEST

The second-seeded Drobny, betting favourite for the title, had produced the best tennis to beat Torben Ulrich. Drobny and Ulrich, both left-handers, delighted a large crowd, who packed around one of the outside courts, with aggressive tennis.

Ulrich attacked at the net constantly, but dropped the first set, 9-11, after holding two set points on Drobny's service with the score 7-6.

Ulrich, continuing to press the attack, won the second set 6-1. He was a little tired in the last two sets and although he volleyed and smashed well he could not counter Drobny's superior ground work and went down in four sets.

In the final stages, Drobny frequently caught Ulrich in the mid-court as the tired Dane continued to advance to the net at every opportunity.

FIGHTING FELICISSIMO

Ampon gave a packed gallery of 6,000 a near thing to a major upset when he led the big blond Bergelin in two sets by decisive 6-2, 6-2 margins.

The Filipino, who looks as if he would not weigh much more than 100 pounds, was a master shotmaker but his drive lacked speed.

After Ampon lost his opening service he relaxed and made actually no effort to fight for the third set. Bergelin quickly ran it out 6-2.

Ampon seemed tired and listless. He stopped running for hard ones. Bergelin, feeling that a victory was possible, pressed the advantage.

The Swede moved fast and began mastering his cross-court drives. He took the first four games without an effort before Ampon suddenly came to life. There on out it was anybody's match.

Bergelin saw a 5-2 lead disappear as Ampon broke service twice and tied the count 5-5. The Swede shook his head in apparent discouragement as the little Filipino's steadiness and sparkling net play dominated the game.

Both held service to seven-all when Ampon's net game collapsed. His volleys fell short into the net. In the final set Bergelin turned on pressure and hit sizzling drives and overheads which forced Ampon into errors, or weak returns. Bergelin finally won the set after holding an early lead 3-1.

GEM IS BROUGHED OFF

In the women's singles, Miss Louise Brough (US) triple Wimbledon Champion, was not extended in beating the tiny Anglo-Chinese player, Miss Gem Hoahing, 6-1, 6-3.

Miss Hoahing, retrieving gallantly, kept the ball in play and there were some long softly hit rallies, but she was no answer to Miss Brough's superior court craft and frequently wrong footed.

In the men's doubles, Felicissimo Ampon and Cesar Carmona (P.I.) were beaten by Vladimir Cernik (Egypt) and Milan Matoun (stateless former Czech), 4-6, 12-10, 6-3, 6-1.

Raymundo Deyro (P.I.) and Eugene Garrett (US) beat the brothers Edmund and Herman David of Britain, 6-2, 6-0, 6-2. The Davids were completely at a loss with their opponents' net work and many often served to each from side to side of the court in vain attempts to return the ball.

Naresh Kumar and Narendra Nath (India) beat F. J. Bartlett and R. T. Connor (South Africa), 6-4, 6-4, 7-5. Kumar and Nath made short work of Bartlett and Connor in their first round match.

The South Africans jumped to a 3-1 lead in the first set as Kumar made several mistakes at the net, but as the Indians found their form it was merely a question of how much they would win in each set.

Nath played a great game. His serving and overhead smashing always puzzled the South Africans.

The American third-seeded doubles team of Art Larsen and Herb Flam lost to Sweden's Davis Cup combination of Lennart Bergelin and Sven Davidsson in the first round, 2-6, 7-5, 6-3, 6-4.

A big crowd gathered around on an outside court to watch legendary Jean Borotra play in a doubles match. The Belgian pair, Jacques Brichant and Philippe Washer outvolleyed and outsmashed the 52-year-old Borotra and Robert Haillet, also of France, to win 6-4, 6-4, 6-2. Borotra showed glimpses of his former greatness but frequently mishimed his shots and missed some easy volleys.—United Press.

Chinese Recreation Club Overwhelmed South China In Needle Tennis Match

By "ARGONAUT"

Chinese Recreation Club overwhelmed South China by eight sets to one in their Men's "A" Division needle Tennis League match yesterday to assure themselves of the title for the 20th time since the League was started in 1909.

The Tai Hang Club's remaining two matches, which they are expected to win, will be against Hongkong Cricket Club and the South China second string.

With K. H. Ip and Gordon Lum missing from the South China ranks, the traditional ball and racket battle between the two leading tennis clubs in the Colony failed to reproduce any semblance of the close and exciting struggle seen last year.

VALIANT RESISTANCE

South China put up a valiant resistance against the all-round superiority of the champions in the opening games and when their No. 1 pair, Edwin Tsai and Chen Yick, took a 3-0 lead from the Tsui brothers it looked as if the almost impossible might yet happen.

Brilliant net play by Tsui Wai-pui, however, enabled the Tsuis to reel off three games in a row to level the score at 3-3.

Chen Yick held his service to regain the lead for his side at 4-3.

The South China pair failed to break through Tsui Yun-pui's service and dropped the vital ninth game on Edwin Tsai's service to enable Tsui Wai-pui to serve through to a 6-4 win.

At the end of the first round, Chinese Recreation Club were leading by three sets to love. K. C. Dao and George Choa gave CRC their fourth set with a 6-1 triumph over Toni Liang and Rock Liang and the Tsuis clinched the issue by accounting for Patrick Poon and Leon Sia by 6-3.

South China's only set came at the end of the second round when Edwin Tsai and Chen Yick, playing forceful tennis, had the better of the more defensive V. T. Wang and Lee Wai-tong by 6-2.

Despite the fact that the issue was already decided, the depleted South China team gave a spirited display in the remaining three sets.

Toni Liang and veteran Rock Liang deserved special mention for the grand game they put up against the Tsuis, and particularly Toni for the many beautiful point-scoring aggressive drives and volleys he put across.

Edwin Tsai and Chen Yick took K. C. Dao and George Choa to a long drawn 5-7 set before conceding defeat.

Brooklyn Power Blows Loose Against Giants

New York, June 27.

Brooklyn power blew loose all over the Polo Grounds today in a 10-4 victory over New York Giants which again put the Dodgers six full games in front in the National League race.

Andy Pafko and Duke Snider each smashed three-run homers to give Don Newcombe the exact margin for his 10th victory. Newcombe was in frequent trouble in the first six innings, but finally got his bearings and set down the last nine Giant batters in succession.

New York went out in front in the second inning on a walk and singles by Wes Westrum and starting pitcher Jim Hearn. Willie Mays momentarily kept Giants in contention with a two-run homer in the bottom of the fourth, but Brooklyn burst loose again with its final six runs in the sixth when Snider got his blast.

RED SOX CLIMB

Third place Boston Red Sox drew within three games of first place in the American League when they subdued Athletics 6-5, while the pace-setting White Sox dropped a 3-2 decision to Tigers in Chicago.

Boston clinched its victory by coming from behind with three runs in the seventh when Dom DiMaggio and Billy Goodman tripled.

Philadelphia had come from behind with a two-run homer in the sixth by Gus Zernial, his 10th of the year.

Tigers, received five-hit pitching from Ted Gray, and Virgil Trucks to gain their victory. Trucks, who relieved Gray in the seventh with two men on base and none out, forced home a runner with two walks, tying the score, but he pitched hitless ball thereafter.

Tigers put over the winning run in the eighth. A scheduled night game between Braves and Phillies at Philadelphia was rained out.—United Press.
